Total Amount Over $2,000

Heppner Relief Committee Ends Work. Fund Closed And Balance Forwarded.

Astoria's fund for the relief of the Heppner sufferers is now closed, and the total amount forwarded through the mayor's committee was $1,749.95. When the amounts reaching nearly $200 forwarded direct by various lodges in the city, are added to this sum, it will be seen that Astoria contributed more than $2000.

Mayor Suprenant, who was himself one of the committee, in announcing last night that the fund was finally closed and that the balance had been sent to Heppner, again expressed his thanks to the citizens for their contributions, to the members of the committee for their excellent work, and to the various persons who gave their services at the different entertainments devised to swell the total of the fund.

The following names, in addition to those already published in The Astorian, complete the list of subscribers to the fund:

- H. B. Dyer, $5.
- H. Close, $1.
- Astoria and N. P. Brewery Baseball club, $8.75.
- H. Hirs, $15.
- Astoria Central Labor Council, $10.
- A. M. Lorentson, $5.
- F. L. Pratt, $1.
- A. O. U. W. Seaside lodge No. 12, $50.
- A. O. U. W. Warrenton lodge No. 52, $10.
- Mrs. J. H. Brenner, $1.
- Miss Ellen Geary, $1.

Total amount through committee, $1749.95.

In the first list published the contribution of Victor Carlson should have been $5 instead of $1 and the name of H. Saxwell should have read H. Laxwell.

FUNERAL OF E. R. MILES.

The funeral of the late Edward R. Miles took place yesterday afternoon from the home of T. F. Lauria, under the auspices of the Knights of Maccoons, Gateway tent. Rev. Harold Oberg delivered the sermon, and the choir of the Methodist church led in the singing, and the steamer Melville carried the remains and sorrowing relatives and friends to Greenwood cemetery. The death of Mr. Miles occurred in Teller City, two months ago and the long delay was occasioned in getting out to the coast, the trip being made by sled to Nome, a distance of nearly 150 miles. From there to Seattle the journey was continued on the steamer Ohio. Before his departure for Teller City, in 1900, deceased was employed as bookkeeper for the Columbia mills at Knappton and it was his intention to return in the early fall and resume his position with Mr. Callender. Mr. Miles was born in Pennsylvania 42 years ago. He is survived by a widow, formerly Miss Winnie Lovett of this city, and a little daughter, 9 months of age.

They were compelled to close the doors for a while at the Unique theater last evening, as the crowd which assembled at the little place of amusement was so large that the management thought it advisable to close the doors for fear that some one might get hurt in the awful jam. As many people were turned away as those who gained admittance. They all came to see the new program, which is an exceedingly good one. The management deserves the credit of having one of the best juvenile teams ever seen in the city of Astoria. They are the Swars children, who arrived today from San Francisco, and if press notices go for anything, they have played the best houses of entertainment in that city. The illustrations for the popular song entitled: "The Tie That Binds," are the most beautiful ever seen on canvas.

EXCURSION TO CATHLAMET SPOILED BY ACCIDENT.

Steamer Hassalo Disabled By Peculiar Mishap in East End Sunday Morning.

An impromptu open air band concert, a lot of disappointed people; a wrecked warehouse and a disabled steamer were the somewhat jumbled effects of the fouling of the rudder of the palatial O. R. & N. steamer Hassalo Sunday morning.

The Hassalo was en route for the city from Portland and the accident occurred shortly after a landing had been made at Hanthorn's cannery and during the preliminary maneuvers to making a landing at Booth's. It is supposed that drift wood became entangled in the steering gear, for the steamer in spite of the efforts of the man at the wheel, made a bee line for the old warehouse of the George & Barker cannery. The nose of the steamer got under the wharf and the upper decks were ripped to pieces. The warehouse all but collapsed and a lot of piling was carried away.

The Hassalo had been chartered by the Red Men to take them and their friends to Cathlamet and 300 people turned out in holiday attire to carry out the proposed program. The band played, but the steamer came not. At first the accident was not generally known and even later its extent was not realized and so the band continued to play, and the people waited.

It was feared at first by the officers of the Hassalo that to back away from the wharf would cause the warehouse to tumble into the stream, but this was at last done without worse damage being caused than already accomplished. The steamer steamed slowly to the O. R. & N. dock and then the band ceased to play and the disappointed people dispersed. However, they were out for excursion and excursion most of them had. A small steamer was brought into service and a large number visited Fort Canby. Others went to Seaside. So an outing was not entirely denied them. The good people of Cathlamet had gone to great preparations to receive their guests and the accident was peculiarly unfortunate for them.

In the afternoon the Hassalo left for Portland where she will be put in shape for service. The damage is estimated at $500.

Forecast Official Seeks Information From Those on River

Edward A. Beals, the forecast official at Portland, has sent out a list of questions that should be answered by property owners affected by rises in the Columbia or Willamette. In answering when river stages are given, the particular gauge referred to should be designated. If possible, one of the following should be chosen: Weather bureau gauge at Portland or The Dalles, or U. S. Engineer gauges at Cascade Locks or Vancouver.

The questions are as follows: Name and address: At what stage does high water begin to cause you inconvenience or damage? At what stage is serious damage done? What is the nature of the damage? Are you affected by the annual rise in the Columbia and the Willamette winter freshets or only by the one and not by the other?

If both, please state whether at the "same stage" the damage likely to occur by a winter freshet is the same as that during the annual rise in the Columbia. How far ahead do you need to be informed of a dangerous rise in order to fully protect your interests? What is the least time ahead, that information of a dangerous rise would prove of value?

With a rising river, between what stages do you want a river bulletin sent to your address? With a falling river, between what stages do you want a river bulletin sent to your address? General remarks.

MARINE NOTES.

The unknown wreck seen by natives of the Marshall Islands, on Mile, one of the group, and reported to the crew of the schooner Carrie and Annie, is not that of the lost French bark De Coude, as was supposed, but of the United States four-masted schooner John D. Talant, a lumber carrier hailing from San Francisco and owned at that port. The Manganita is now commanded by Captain Patrick Hyrue, who will be formally installed today.

The steamer Elder arrived in yesterday with a good list of passengers. The O. R. & N. company's dock was a busy place yesterday afternoon with the steamers Elder, Elmore, and Nahcotta alongside at the same time. The British bark Saxon arrived in Sunday. The steamer Alliance left out yesterday morning for San Francisco.

Harry Morse At Nushagak

First Of The Northern Fleet To Arrive. All On Board Reported Well.

Advises just received from Nushagak Alaska, state that the bark Harry Morse, which left Astoria on April 17, last, arrived at her destination the cannery of the Columbia River Packers' association on the Nushagak river, Alaska, on Saturday May 9, with all well on board. The Harry Morse was the first sailing vessel to arrive at that river this season.

Under date of May 14 Superintendent Carlson writes:

"On our arrival here we found the streams all full of ice and only that in the main river broken up, so it was impossible to launch scows or steamers. The natives all predict a late season and all say that the fall and winter were unusually severe. The damage to the cannery building caused by the tidal wave of last fall, was found to be as reported, the foundation suffering most severely. Huler's cannery was shifted 12 feet from its original position and the buildings were practically destroyed. The China house, mess and bunk house being completely wrecked and two scows smashed to pieces. The salting station at Ekuk point is also completely wrecked. The damage sustained by other canneries is said to be largely overestimated."

Later advices state that the ice in the creek on which the C. R. & A. cannery is situated broke up on May 15, but that floating ice greatly interfered with discharging the vessel, which was completed by June 9. Owing to the presence of ice and the ground being still frozen it was impossible, even at that late date, to replace the damaged foundations. Operations were under way for rebuilding the demolished fish dock and getting things in shape for the season's work. The men were to draw for boats on June 9 and to get out for fish.

The Pacific & Navigation steamer, Mary D. Hume, arrived at Nushagak May 29. No mention was made of the St. Nicholas and Berlin, which left Astoria for Nushagak at the same time but it is presumed that they arrived safely. The steamer North Star is spoken of as having arrived.
