Indian Relics Unearthed.

The Galice Consolidated Mining Company made a strike of a peculiar kind a few days ago. It recently purchased a tract of gravel on the bank of Rogue river and has just completed a ditch to it. In prospecting the bar an old Indian burying ground was uncovered, and up to date at least 100 skulls and a corresponding number of bones have been washed out.

The gravel was the scene of one of the closing battles of the Rogue river war, and the bodies of the Indians killed at that time are among the find. The major portion of them, however, are much older than those buried in the '50s, and were probably in the ground when Lewis and Clark visited the coast. Arrowheads and old Indian jewelry are found in the graves. The ground is rich in gold and the company will work it next year, an elevator being now put in place for that purpose.—Jacksonville Times.
