NO SLEEP IN TWO DECADES

New Jersey Man Claims That He Has Not Enjoyed Slumber for Twenty Years.

FELL INTO THE HABIT OF IT

Doctors' Bills Caused Him Unrest and He Is Now Unable to Sleep a Wink During the Night.

Passaic, N. J., Oct. 18.—This city has an unusual "freak" in Jacob Castelline, of No. 453 Harrison st., who says he has not slept for the last twenty years. The man's neighbors bear witness to his wakefulness, and he declares that, although he has consulted many physicians here and elsewhere, none have been able to relieve him of his strange ailment. Castelline was born in Holland sixty-seven years ago, and came to this country when he was but sixteen years of age. When he was a young man his wife became ill, and the doctor's bills began to pile on him. The worry over this made him pass many sleepless nights, and as he grew older the nights that he slept became fewer. Since he passed his forty-seven birthday he has not slept a wink, he says. He has taken all kinds of medicine and spent hundreds of dollars in trying to make himself sleep, but has found nothing that will do him any good. Physicians who have seen the old man say that he must sleep "inwardly" or his strength would give out.

ABOUT PUGET SOUND SALMON.

Fish Lore From "Salmon Catching And Canning On Puget Sound." "The great interest in the fishing industry of Puget sound is in the sockeye, the deep, rich red and oily fish of commerce. It is a beautiful fish, quite uniform in size, ranging from 7 lbs. to 10 lbs., perhaps some smaller and some larger. It takes from ten to twelve fish to pack a case of four dozen 1-pound cans. These fish run in the sound usually from the early part of July to the middle of August, and during this time the traps also take quantities of spring salmon or "chinooks," the same variety that is packed on the Columbia river and stands so well in the trade under famous Columbia river labels. They, too, are a beautiful fish; clean, gamey and meaty. They run from 20 lbs. to 80 lbs. in size. They will take a hook but a sockeye won't. No one knows anything about the life of the sockeye in the ocean. No one knows their haunts, their feeding ground or their habits. In all the researches, the deep fishing, the exploration of the government boats, in all the seeking for specimens, the scientific fishing and the fishing for market in all the crooks and crannies of the world, nowhere at any time, nor under any circumstances, has anybody ever taken or seen a sockeye salmon. They are swallowed in the depths and mysteries of the vast ocean and seen no more for four years, when they suddenly show on the salmon banks of the Straits of Juan de Fuca headed for their doom, their destiny fulfilled; their race run they sport and play on their way to death. Nothing is ever found in the stomach of a sockeye. No one knows what they feed on. They never eat from the time they start for their spawning grounds. The "chinooks" look exactly alike, you can't tell one from the other, but by plugging them with a knife you will find some of them red, some of them bright pink, and still some absolutely white without the least tinge of color. The cheaper grades of fish run later in the season. Cohoes in September. The coho is not as red as the sockeye. On the market it is usually sold with Columbia river silversides and Alaska medium reds."

ANIMALS WITH LONG MEMORIES.

Bronx Lions and Tigers Remember Trainer Hagenbeck After 20 Months. New York, Oct. 18.—Carl Hagenbeck, the animal trainer, sold two lions and two tigers to The Bronx Zoo 20 months ago. Mr. Hagenbeck visited the Zoo yesterday and in company with Director Hornaday, went in to see how his old pets were thriving. The trainer entered quietly, walking to the center of the building. He saw his pets, Queenie and Wilhelm, the lion and lioness, dozing in one cage, and Count and Countess, the tigers, sleepily parading in another. Then Hagenbeck called out in German: "I wonder how Queenie and Wilhelm are? What has become of my Count and Countess?"

Instantly there was a commotion in the cage. The four animals fell over each other in the effort simultaneously to get through the bars. Wilhelm got there first and began to purr. Then Queenie crowded him for place and the heads of the two beasts were laid close together at the cage's edge. Alternately they growled at each other and purred at Hagenbeck, who put both hands between the bars and patted them as one would stroke a house cat.
