The republican primaries were held yesterday and the regular ticket was elected. The convention will be held Wednesday afternoon.

The common council will meet in regular session tomorrow night. The session will doubtless be a very busy one, as many matters are to be called up for disposal.

The county court meets in adjourned session tomorrow, to take up the matter of an exhibit for Clatsop county at the Lewis and Clark fair. Several other matters will also be discussed.

The Dixie Girls, who tendered a delightful autumn party Friday evening, are Miss Harriet Wise, Miss Elizabeth Gregory, Miss Anna Painter, Miss May Parker, Miss Jeanette Peterson, Miss Nora Wilson, Miss Anna Schistad, Miss Mary Gregory, Miss Ella Eckstrom and Miss Leatha Stevenson, of Portland.

Terry McKean, of Astoria, is now a member of the James Neill company, which is producing "The Holy City." The company will appear at Seattle during the present week. Mr. McKean is cast as "John," one of the disciples, Mr. Neill taking the leading role. The company includes many well known performers.

It is extremely doubtful if the Commercial Club will further continue Saturday football. The football team has cost the club considerable money and people will not patronize the game on Saturday. At valley towns 2000 to 3000 people turn out, but yesterday the receipts at A. F. C. park were short of $100. The club is out about $75 on the game. For many months there has been demand for Saturday instead of Sunday sport, but every effort on the part of the club to do away with the Sunday game has resulted in financial loss. As a result Sunday football will probably be played in the future.

James J. Jeffries did not referee yesterday's football game because, it is said by his associates, he was not invited to do so. The champion spent the entire day in the city and had the pleasure of slushing around in the mud, which seems to have been unusually plentiful. The big fellow is the picture of health and is immensely enjoying his theatrical tour. He states that he is out of the boxing game for a while, and in response to a question declared that he had drawn the color line and would not meet Jack Johnson, who has been issuing periodical challenges. However, Jeff is satisfied he could put the darky out of business in a punch. The outcome of the Brit-Gans fight did not surprise Jeffries, who knows how headstrong Britt is when things are coming his way. The champion wants to do some shooting in the Willamette valley on his present trip and hopes to spend a day or two among the Denny pheasants.

Michael Gorman was in the city yesterday. He is the democratic leader of Wahkiakum county, Wash., and had been over in the Deep river district, where he explained to the voters that J. Bruce Polworth ought to be defeated for county attorney. "Mr. McFadden will receive two votes to Mr. Polworth's one," declared Mr. Gorman. "Polworth is a goner, as sure as you are born. Saltpeter wouldn't save him. We will elect three of our candidates at least." Recently Mr. Polworth said in an interview published in The Astorian that the respectable element of the democratic party had remained away from the Cathlamet convention. Mr. Gorman laughs at this assertion. "Mr. Polworth has tried to overthrow and disrupt the party organization," said the leader, "and we came to the conclusion that we would not stand for it. That's why Polworth is running on the republican ticket." Republicans and democrats agree that the election will be an interesting one.

"Davy Crockett" was presented to a packed house at Fishers' last night. A critic would not have gone into ecstasies over the histrionic work of any of the performers, which does not mean, however, that the production was woefully lame. It was, on the contrary, fairly good, but, all "jolly-ing" aside, the crowd paid the price of admission to enjoy the novelty of seeing big Jim Jeffries, handsome and the soul of good-nature, portray as best he knew how the character of the famous backwoodsman. Davy was a quaint fellow whose blunt humor seemed to appeal to the audience, which frequently gave vent to its merriment. It can be said for the champion that, while he is always trying to add to his knowledge of the new game with which he has taken up, he is not lacking in comparison with the other members of his company. His voice is good and his presence is pleasing. The crowd gave him a warm welcome and seemed happy to have been afforded the opportunity. The three-round contest at the conclusion of the performance was more a joke than anything else, Joe Kennedy being compelled to "stick away" on account of illness and a Spokane heavyweight being substituted. The substitute's reassuring remarks to Jeff made the crowd laugh. Jeff gave an exhibition of his fine footwork, but otherwise the encounter was devoid of interest, except, of course, the novelty of the thing. While Jeff has been cut out for a prizefighter and not particularly for an actor, the people like him, even on the stage, which is a whole lot more than can be said of many a thespian who receives money for public performances.

Already straight-out democrats are planning the nomination of a straight ticket for the approaching municipal election. They are said to be terribly wrought up over the nomination of the citizen ticket and many openly declare they will support the republican candidates. Among the angry ones is Representative-elect J. N. Laws. "You ask me what I think of the proceedings of the convention tonight," said Mr. Laws, conversing with a reporter. "What can an old democrat think of them? The ways of the citizen politician pass my comprehension. As an old chap, I have nothing in particular to say. I am simply a democrat, and it seems that in these modern times there are no democrats in Oregon. I was more than surprised when I heard my old friend Dealey make the nominating speech which he delivered at the convention. You ask me why? Because, after the conversation I had with him, I was astonished to hear him make the talk that he did. Well, I am very glad that I am not in politics. Why? Simply because it leads one to mistrust his best friend. Am I a democrat? After the strictest religion of my sect; I was brought up one, and I for one am not ashamed to be branded as such." Questioning elicited the information from Mr. Laws that Mr. Dealey had not been friendly toward A. M. Smith when the latter's aspirations politically had been under discussion, and when Mr. Dealey nominated Mr. Smith last night Mr. Laws was surprised.

PERSONAL MENTION.
