The Sue. H. Elmore, Five Hundred; The Newport and Tug Columbia in Like Sums, and John Doe, One Hundred-They May Be Remitted.

The collector of customs for the Port of Astoria has found it necessary to apply some of the penalties set up by the government for the alleged purpose of disciplining marine masters when they transgress the letter of their licenses or the prescribed limitations of the vessels they commaand.

She left Astoria on her last cruise to Tillamook with a passenger list well within her licensed number, but, on reaching Garabaldi, a way point within the sea points of Tillamook Bay, a lot of pic-nickers down there from the upper towns, friends and customers of the line, who think they own the Sue H. and take all sorts of liberties with her every time she enters the bay, boarded her for a ride up to the town, without the captain's knowledge or permission. They were not travellers by the steamer under the correct and rigid interpretation of her license, and there was no deliberate nor wanton breach of her franchise from the government.

It is an invariable custom down there for any and everyone to board her and ride from point to point and nothing has ever been thought of it, and certain ly not a cold blooded evasion of the standards under which she has done

What extenuating conditions exist in behalf of the tug Columbia and her officers, there is no one in the city to say. Hers is the plainest case of the three in point of conclusiveness, and yet perhaps sufficient may be offered, at the proper time and place to clear her of the penalty, and oly poor "John Doe" be brought to book. He always is; it is his fate, and fate is hard to mollify es pecially when it is acting in conjunction with the big government,

The captains involved are: Paul Schroeder of the Sue H. Elmore; L. Snyder, of the Newport; and James Magee of the Columbia.

WILL IT HAPPEN.

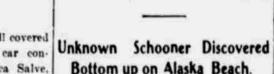

A well known railroad man of this city spent Monday night with friends at Seaside and the all-engrossing topic of conversation at that usually happy little resort was a tidal wave due to reach this coast about 2 o'clock p. m. today. No one knows how the rumor started, nor who is responsible for it, but he says the interest in it and the possibilities with which it is fraught fairly possessed every one he met. Some laughed at it, some treated it guardedly and some were impressed to the point of hardly-concealed fear. It is easy to work up feeling on a basis H. Elmore, carrying an excess of pas- like that.
