The Red Men are planning a big dedication event. It is probable that the head officers of the Great Council will pay an official visit at the time.

PROBATE COURT MATTERS.

Three Orders Issued by Judge Trenchard Yesterday Afternoon.

In probate court yesterday afternoon County Judge Trenchard issued three orders dealing with as many estates.

Blver Jedness was appointed administrator of the estate of Andrew Erickson, deceased, and John Frye, O. F. Morton and Max Young were appointed appraisers. The appraisement will be made on October 28th.

F. F. A. Hildebrand, administrator of the estate of Peter Wolf, filed his final account and Monday, November 20th was the date set for the hearing of the same.

J. E. Higgins, guardian and J. P. Svenson, administrator of the estate of Helen Swanson, deceased, appeared in court, where the former filed his final report and asked that he be discharged. Helen Swanson was the wife of J. P. Svenson and on December 26, 1900, died intestate leaving her husband and two minor children. J. E. Higgins was appointed guardian of the latter and his report to the court showed that he had on hand $333.53 in cash and 15 shares of Alaska Packer's association stock of a par value of $100 each. The cash and stock was turned over to Svenson and Higgins was ordered discharged.

ZACK PAGARES SHOT

Papagiannakis Tries To Kill Former Astorian.

QUARREL ARISES OVER MONEY

Papagiannakis Left Astoria for Portland Yesterday Morning and It Is Supposed That His Object in Going Was to Have it Out With Pagares.

Yesterday morning news was received here of the shooting of Zack Pagares by George Papagiannakis in a quarrel over money that the latter claimed was due him over the sale of the Toke Point restaurant in Astoria. The wound, while serious is not considered dangerous.

Pagares came to Astoria in the latter part of last March and purchased the Toke Point restaurant. He conducted the business until the latter part of July when he disposed of the business and went to Seaside where he remained for two weeks, afterwards going to Portland. Previous to the purchase of the Toke Point restaurant Pagares had been in business in Ilwaco and other points in this section of the country.

A special dispatch to the Astorian from Portland gives the following account of the shooting:

Zack Pagares, a Greek, and one of the best known of the minor oyster-house keepers of Portland, was shot down by George Papagiannakis, a countryman, this morning in a quarrel in the former's restaurant at 192 Fourth street. Papagiannakis fled after the shooting, and has not yet been captured. The shot was fired when the men were not more than six feet apart, and the bullet struck Pagares just below the left ear, ranging backward and lodging in the back of the neck. The wound is not regarded as serious.

According to the story told by Pagares the trouble arose over the sale of a restaurant in Astoria. Pagares conducted an oyster-house there for a time, and sold his half interest in the place to an uncle of the man who did the shooting this morning. This uncle, who goes by the name of Nico George and Nico Pompanani, agreed to pay $350 for Pagares' interest, and did pay $290.

Papagiannakis came into Pagares' restaurant this morning, the latter says, and said his uncle had taken his money and used it in buying the restaurant, and he demanded it back. A quarrel ensued, and Pagares twice put the man out of his restaurant. A third time he came back and asked for a cup of coffee, and as soon as Pagares turned to tell the waiter to give it to him, Papagiannakis pulled a revolver and fired. The police believe all the facts have not been disclosed.

Greek Makes His Escape.

As soon as the shot was fired Papagiannakis fled from the restaurant. Pagares has been a resident of Portland 15 years. Papagiannakis is a Columbia river fisherman. He came from Astoria yesterday. He is a native of Nicolo, an island of Turkey, and was born and raised a fisherman.

Though Sheriff Word and his deputies and the police force of Portland have been making a determined effort ever since the shooting to capture George Papagiannakis, he is still at liberty. Since he disappeared under the wharves near the foot of Alder street no trace of him has been found. The police patrol took the wounded man to St. Vincent's hospital. Dr. F. Cauthorn attended him and found the wound was not necessarily dangerous, unless complications set in.

The sheriff is in possession of pictures of Papagiannakis and his uncle, who, it is alleged, prompted the shooting.

The Astoria police were on the lookout for the Greek when the train arrived from the north last evening, but he was not among the passengers.

TINIEST IN THE WORLD.

Chiquita and Her Carriage Amuse the People of Astoria.

Chiquita is in town.

The smallest woman in the world—a woman who would make nothing more than a good sized doll, for the ordinary little Astoria miss, ins here to entertain the public, and incidentally show how real tiny a human individual can be and still live.

Chiquita amuses people by doing several stunts at the Star theatre, and her dainty little carriage (which some insist is far too small for the little lady) amuses those who see it pass along the street, drawn by the smallest Shetland pony which Chiquita's manager has been able to find, and driven by a small boy who looks like a Goliath, perched on the seat.

But Chiquita is as eccentric as she is tiny, and withal, she is very entertaining. She has two big dogs (Chiquita thinks they are large) and they behave very badly. The little Mexican lady is trying to train her pets, but they are impudent, thoughtless, and unobliging. What is worse, they seem not to care a whit for the scoldings which little Chiquita gives them, nor for the awful wallpings which she occasionally administers, when her patience ceases to be a virtue.

She is playing a bill at the Star theatre this week, and in spite of the fact that her height had been announced at only 23 inches, most people were greatly surprised at the diminutiveness of the little Mexican lady.

DISCOVERS NATURAL GAS.

Natural gas exists in large quantities on the ranch of C. S. Brown, on the Lewis and Clark river, and it is not improbable that steps may be taken in the near future, toward the development of the field. Mr. Brown first discovered the existence of the gas, on a slough close to the river, nearly a year ago, and since that time has been conducting a series of experiments on a small scale. He is now positive that a good quality of the product can be had in paying quantities.

Mr. Brown first saw gas bubbling from the water of a slough on his farm, and at once commenced a series of experiments. He first drove a pipe several feet into the ground, from whence the gas emanated and connected this pipe with a large reservoir, where he concentrated the gas. He has taken no steps toward development on a large scale, nor does he utilize the gas that he now obtains from his present plant. He is certain, however, that gas exists in paying quantities, and may take steps in the near future to develop his find.
