WEATHER TODAY.

- Portland, Oct. 25.—Western Oregon and Western Washington: Sunday, increasing cloudiness with showers near coast, cooler in the interior.
- Eastern Oregon and Eastern Washington: Fair, with slowly rising temperatures.

PORTENTIOUS MOMENT.

The next few days must be taken by the intelligent, thinking citizen to weigh the political situation in advance and determine just what he wants in the way of government for the oncoming two years. He must satisfy himself as to the conditions and whether they are to be perpetuated or whether he shall intervene for a change; having settled this conclusively in his own mind, he can balance the abilities and characteristics of the several candidates who seek his suffrage, as to their especial fitness to carry out the changes he desires as well as to their personal coincidence with his views. These things are all to be balanced before any deliberate, healthful work can be done either in the primaries or at the general election. And while reviewing the field he must put himself in line for the proper exercise of his vote at both polls, by registering during the coming week for the primary election and again registering between November 16, and December 9, for the general election, the non-performance of either of these functions will disqualify him utterly for the political engagement ahead.

The Morning Astorian finds pleasure in noting a general access of interest in the approaching election throughout the republican ranks in the city and does not hesitate to predict unqualified victory if that interest is nourished and applied with straight-forward vigor and timeliness, a procedure that shall lack no endorsement nor aid from these columns; but it does insist upon a full republican ticket manned by the best republicans in the city from top to bottom, and a clean, wholesome, unrelenting fight for such issues as shall preseat themselves.

Republican success achieved at the polls, this paper shall stand for a business administration of municipal affairs from the smallest to the largest of its transactions and at the hands of every man engaged from mayor to janitor. This is an issue to which every taxpayer and honest citizen may rally without doubt or reproach, and will form the basis of every contention championed by this paper in the fight.

From some source it is learned that the gamblers, in their parlors are going in for "an open town." Very well. This issue has been raised before, fought before, defeated before. The Astorian will take its place as contestant, fighter and victor once more, and do it gladly.

SAME HERE.

The following, from the Salem Journal, with slight variations which are easily surmisable, is nearly applicable to this city and its relation to the dyspeptic giant of Alder street.

"Let us drop Mr. Scott and the Oregonian's attacks on the city. This city has enough merit to stand up and grow against all the spleen and bitterness of the few survivals of mossbackism that engage in such methods. The whole state has been drained for Portland the past year, both of public and private funds. We are all slowly recuperating. It will be a year before we get fully over the drafts on our purses made by the fair the past year. But it was our fair, and we must not get blue or complain. Let us all go slow about declaring a boycott on Portland. We have many true friends of Salem down there, and we should not alienate them. What Salem has accomplished has had to be done without Portland. But let us overlook that, overlook the slander about our water supply, their fight against a governor's home here, the trick to take away the state fair, and the recent talk about making that city the state capital. The Salem papers have not always spoken kindly about the Oregonian. But the Salem papers have always loyally taken hold of anything that Portland people have come up and said was important to them, even to helping them make a great success of Portland day. So let us drop Mr. Scott, close up the gap, go on about our business of making the best inland city in the Northwest. That is our business, and let us stand up for it. D—n the man who will not stand up for his own town first."

MAY NOT BE AVOIDED.

There are some things by which a city is judged, especially by strangers, and the chief of these is its hotels. Astoria has some good hotels, what there are of them, and plenty of them, such as they are. It must have at least one big, metropolitan house, of such calibre and appointment as shall make the name of the city resound through the country. If you are in earnest about having a hostelry of this sort, go to the next meeting of the chamber of commerce and express yourself. November 6, 1905.

OUR FASHION LETTER

Severe Styles Are to Prevail in Chemisettes.

RIBBON RUFFLED PETTICOATS

Mixed Effects In the Cheaper Materials Are to Be Much Used For Walking Suits—Evening Hats of Lace or of Panné Velvet.

Chemisettes are to be worn again this fall, but there is a great difference in their makeup. The exquisite sheer effects have given place to severe styles—those of pique and of linen laid in small plaits. With them are worn stiff little black ties. Embroidered ties fashioned on the same lines as the small butterfly ties, but made of heavy linen or pique, are to be smart this year. The stiff little bow loses all of its manliness when embroidered, yet retains the severe style.

DARIA CLOTH FROCK.

Ribbon ruffles on petticoats are the latest wrinkle. They are more expensive than those of silk, but much more stunning and newer.

The swaggiest petticoats in silk to be worn with fall costumes are in the shops. They either match the suit or dress with which they are worn or are part of a color scheme dominating all the accessories.

The gown in the cut is of dahlia cloth. The plaited skirt is trimmed at the foot line with lapped bands of the material. The coat is particularly pretty with its empire effect, ornamented with collar and buttons and velvet.

ATTRACTIVE TRIFLES.

Among the fall materials to be made up into walking suits mixed effects are particularly noticeable in the less expensive goods, such as homespun, which is such an excellent cloth for hard usage. Mixed grays, blues and browns are the fashionable colors. Brown will not, however, be as modish as it was last winter. Red, too, will not be as widely seen, although it is far too attractive a shade to disappear altogether. Dark grays among the autumn models are assured of popularity, while, of course, blue in any shade will prove a safe investment, for it is a color never frowned upon by Dame Fashion. The straight brim is not seen on the new hats. Even the French sailors have many little curves and turns that are extremely becoming. They tilt at a perilous angle from the back, and the trimming is placed at that point or at the sides.

wear will be made of white lace or white panne velvet and lace. Small tips arranged in bunches have taken the place in millinery occupied last season by the long plumes.

One of the novelties in the jewelry line is a small jeweled pin that is intended to hold the lace collar up in the back, thus doing away with the unsightly whalebone.

The waist pictured is of heavy linen worked in English embroidery. The fronts have a pretty, simple design fitted over a chemisette of plumed lawn. The elbow sleeves are formed of an embroidered motif arranged about a tucked fullness at the shoulders. Bands of the embroidery hold the puff just above the wrist in position.

SCHOOL COSTUMES.

Before long woolen school dresses will be in requisition. The most attractive and serviceable of these gowns are made of Scotch plaid, with the skirt, if one prefers, made up on the bias in circular effect. The blouse waist, cut Dutch neck, has a piping of a plain contrasting color outlining it.

BLUE SERGE FROCK.

The sleeves are of course made entirely of cloth, and the medium bishop is the best style, with a pretty cuff trimmed with the plain material. A belt of leather and a guimpe of broderie anglaise finish the costume.

Guimpe school dresses still hold their own for girls from six to fourteen, but a variation of this style, a really practical variation, is the chemisette guimpe frock, with the separate yoke made on a foundation or body like a guimpe, but sleeveless.

Sailor suits for small girls with a dozen new tricks about them are popular. The prettiest are made of checks in any of the modish combinations. An extra touch of smartness is given them by hand scalloping the collar and cuffs.

The charming little dress illustrated is designed for girls from six to eight. It is fashioned from a bright shade of soft blue serge. The skirt has a circular flare and is trimmed with lines of narrow black braid applied between bands of the serge. The short coat has the same trimming about the shoulders on the round collar and straight band cuffs. Black frogs fasten the little jacket.

LA MODE'S VAGARIES.

The veil plays a prominent part in fall millinery. All sorts of handsome veils are seen on hats, apparently forming part of the color scheme. For example, a large pale blue felt is covered with blue and white velvet rose with brown centers and is enveloped in a brown veil lace, very filmy and transparent.

Bows and knots are favorite trimmings on fall and winter dressy costumes. Full little bows of chantilly lace made from four inch insertion with waved edges are set ladder fashion upon the bodices of evening gowns and head the deep flounces on the skirts, while bold inset motifs of chauntilly are placed on the flounces. The lace bow effect might be artistically applied to any kind of sheer material.

The most popular tennis dress consists of a white cloth skirt and white tuss are these lines from J. H. Simmons, of Casey, Ia. Think what might have resulted from his terrible cough if he had not taken the medicine about which he writes: "I had a fearful cough, that disturbed my night's rest. I tried everything, but nothing would relieve it, until I took D. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which completely cured me." Instantly relieves and permanently cures all throat and lung diseases; prevents grip and pneumonia. At Chas. Rogers' druggist; guaranteed; 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
