Portland, Dec. 16 .- Potato buyers find it difficult to secure fancy stock in Oregon, on account of growers desiring to nold for better okers, "The temporary excitement in the potato market a few tion," a buyer said today, "as dealers paid better prices than the export demand justified. These high priced potaties are still in the warehouses in Portland, and were they shipped to San Francisco, a loss of 20c per mek would result. Grewers, however, do not realise this, and in holding their fancy stock for higher prices they run the risk of loss. The California market is well supplied with Salinas Burbanks, and until these are exhausted there will be no botter offers for Oregon potatoes.

"In the meantime there are plenty of and as these cannot be shipped they must be consumed at home. This conper 100 pounds in the country."
