PORTLAND, Feb. 12.—Dealers are arranging for shipments of live hogs by rail from Omaha, St. Paul and other livestock centers of the East.

"We would have been shipping live hogs from the East ere this," reported Louis Burke today, "but for danger of bad weather east of the Rockies. Hogs shipped in stock cars would suffer should a blizzard be encountered, and thus the risk of loss is too great.

"We can see no relief from the present scarcity of hogs all year, except by shipping from the East, as farmers out here have not considered hog-raising profitable on account of the high prices of grain. It thus looks as though pork would be dear out here for several months yet."

Dressed hogs have been of light receipt on Front street for several weeks, and retailers have been driven to their wits' end to obtain enough to supply the demand. All kinds of carcasses, big and little, are disposed of without difficulty on arrival.
