PORTLAND, March 17. Up-country orders for California fruits and vegetables have been piling up on the Front street commission houses for several days, but these cannot be filled for fear of cold weather en route.

"We expect an unusually busy time when the weather improves," is the usual statement of commission firms that must now keep their stuff off the sidewalks.

Four cars of bananas are still supposed to be in the railroad round-house at Billings, Mont., and these are needed here badly.
