nit men fear a shortage in tropical l California fancy fruits. The arrivals ve been very heavy, but as the dend for shipping exceeds expectations rthe holiday trade, unless the express resorted to the market will be almost have before the carload consignments arrive.

This, however, may be crossing the dge before coming to it. for orders placed for probably all the fruit ded, and it may come in time to avert threatened scarcity.

Rather full lots of cantaloupes are in ock, for the cool weather of the past days has influenced buying to a nsiderable extent. The melons are forfunately in first class shape, and dealers expect stocks to be pretty well cleaned before the danger point arrives. Price is considered steady at $3.50 a mate.

Car lots of peaches, 'cots and plums robably will be coming along about the hiddle of next week. No improvement t obe expected in apricots, and the puit is hardly in sufficient quantity to paintain a quotation.

Valley cherries of the Bing variety resented a fine appearance on account careful boxing and a good quality of he fruit. They are quoted at $1.10 to 1.25 per box.
