PORTLAND, July 13.—A word of advice to farmers and out-of-town store-keepers, if followed, will be of benefit to them: For the past week or two veals sent to this market have arrived in such condition that the carcasses were disposed of at the value of the hides, 24 to 30 hours in box cars and hot freight sheds does the business for dressed meats. Unless train connections can be effected through which the meat can be delivered not much over 10 to 12 hours after shipping, it were far better and more profitable to dispose of it at home than to ship in during hot weather. The crematory makes no returns for stuff sent to be converted into fertilizer; on the other hand, there is cartage to be paid. It is extremely doubtful if any large profit is made in raising calves to dispose of to the garbage man.

Dealers can and do sell prime veals at good prices, and there is a good healthy demand for them. The carcasses must, however, be in first-class condition to get the benefit of quoted prices. The only way to receive expected returns is to get the meat through rapidly.

No sort of meat keeps in transit is hot weather unless frozen, and points given concerning veal shipments apply to dressed mutton, lambs and hogs as well.

Eggs and Butter.

This continues to be a very good market for all concerned in the egg market, prices being firm at 22c, which is considered reasonable to buyer and satisfactory to seller. In some quarters a half cent is named on top of the generally accepted figure. Ranch eggs are not coming in sufficiently to meet requirements, but the light receipts are being augmented by the Eastern goods, that sell side by side with the local eggs. No Portland storage eggs are being withdrawn, as far as could be learned.

Butter is firmer, though there are still very heavy receipts from usual sources of supply, and some from quarters new to this trade previous to this year.
