HOEFLER'S HANDSOMEST SWEET SHOP

"KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN"

Presented by Lee Willard Company Tonight at the Star Theatre.

There is a very pleasant program slated for this week, that of "Kathleen Mavourneen," the most beautiful of all Irish plays. Kathleen has endeared itself to the hearts of all those who have seen it, and everyone who has, wishes to see it again, and those who have not can not afford to miss this, the greatest gem of Irish melodramas. The beauty of this play is that the whole story is an interpretation of Kathleen's dream on Saint Patrick's Eve, where the poor humble Irish peasant girl dreams she has married wealth, but only to find that her husband, Bernard Cavanaugh, is a scoundrel, who wishes to do away with her after getting tired of the poor, ignorant though pretty Irish peasant; and the awakening to the realization that it is all a dream, winding up in a real old Irish reel, sends the audience home happy and pleased.

Mr. Willard as Terrance O'Moor, has portrayed this character throughout the entire tour and is considered the very best Terrance. There is lots of comedy in this play that makes it most pleasing. Next Thursday this company produces the "Southern Romance," a picture of the South.

OYSTER LAND DEAL.

Roy Mills Reported to Have Sold His Oyster Land at Bay Center.

It is reported that a deal has been practically closed whereby Roy Mills of Bay Centre has sold his valuable oyster grounds to John Anderson of Portland who expects to take personal charge of them. The Mills beds were selected in the days when there was plenty of oyster ground to be had and they have been very profitable. The sale is regrettable to the extent that Pacific County may lose Mr. Mills as a citizen though his plans are all in the air as yet. The sale includes his house in Bay Centre and all of his oyster outfit including the launch Eagle.

It is reported also that W. R. Marion has sold his extensive holdings in oyster grounds as well and that the price is $100,000, but the story lacks confirmation and is based largely on the recent visit here of Mr. Swanberg, a member of the Morgan Oyster Company of San Francisco.—South Bend Journal.

VOLCANOES OF THE NORTHWEST

THIS WHOLE SECTION ONCE RAVAGED BY SEISMIC TROUBLES—THEIR RENEWED ACTIVITY NOT IMPROBABLE IN THE FUTURE

The South Bend Journal contains the following interesting story of volcanoes in the northwest, and the imminence of their renewed activity:

"There seems to be a prevailing disposition on the part of the press of the state to belittle the possibilities for earthquakes in the northwest as though it were reasonable to expect any sensible man to see any distinction in that respect between the California coast and the coast of Oregon and Washington. The stubborn facts are that the northwest coast has under gone some pretty severe shakes in the past century and is just as available as San Francisco to the recurrence of such tremblers. There are 20 prominent peaks in the Cascade range from the Columbia to the British Columbia line from which eruptions may take place and from several of them there have been eruptions which are fully attested. These were eruptions of Mt. Tacoma in 1829, 1843 and 1846; of Mt. St. Helens in 1831, 1842, 1843, for 85 days in 1843-44 and in 1846. Any old prospector, like James Taylor of this city who is well acquainted with Mt. St. Helens, can give evidences of present volcanic activity. Then there were eruptions of Mt. Baker in 1820, 1846, 1853 and 1880, of Mt. Hood in 1831 and 1869 and Mt. Olympus in 1861 and in 1880.

"Besides the many Indian traditions of eruptions within the past century in these mountain peaks there is the evidence of such reliable explorers as Fremont, Father De Smet, Rev. Hines and Rev. Samuel Parker, all of whom visited this country before 1860. In 1893 Prof. F. G. Plummer read a paper entitled "Recent Volcanic Activity in Washington" at the Academy of Science in Annie Wright Seminary in Tacoma which attracted widespread attention. In it the descriptions of two comparatively recent shocks, as follows:

"The most violent earthquake of recent times occurred in September of the year 1870. All evidence goes to prove that the shocks came from the direction of Mount Olympus in the Olympic range. On the Cowlitz prairies stock was stampeded, chimneys were destroyed, fences were leveled and in the houses the chairs rocked and clocks were thrown from the mantels. At Yelm there were observed two very strong shocks, followed by several slight ones. Clocks were stopped and many thrown down. Chickens were thrown off the roosts and chimneys and buildings were cracked. In many places earth fissures were formed, and in the Columbia river trail it was necessary to make repairs in many places to prevent accidents to horses. Numerous cracks were found, some as far east as Okanogan and Yakima. In many a dull rumbling noise was heard. At Olympia houses rocked violently, throwing down chairs and destroying crockery, and a child was thrown from its bed. The maple trees swayed to and fro like inverted pendulums, and the people who stood in the streets to avoid falling chimneys, were thrown to the ground. In Lewis county many chimneys were broken off close to the roofs. The sidewheel steamer Alida was lying at her dock at Port Gamble with her stern pointing north and the dock to the westward. Her officers and her men were startled by a strong blow against the guards on the port side, and rushed out upon the dock thinking the steamer had been run into. A strong swell immediately began to roll the boat, and from the excited people who had rushed into the streets, they learned that an earthquake had occurred. Gamblers deserted their tables, leaving their gold in the scramble to get out from under the buildings. It may be presumed that Port Gamble was well and truly named. With this earthquake is connected the fall of a large portion of Mount Tacoma, for upon the first clear day, following the shocks it could be clearly seen that the Liberty Cap (or north peak) had lost about 80 acres from its southern end, which had been detached from the main part of the peak and was distributed down the western slope. The Liberty Cap now shows a nearly perpendicular face on the southern side which is plainly visible from points south of Yelm. Were the evidence as to the direction of the earthquake less clear, it might be argued that the falling of this immense mass produced the shocks, but the reverse is probably true. The Puyallup Indians have a tradition that at one time Taocob (Mount Tacoma) broke near the summit. A point fell off and drifted over to the Olympic—but never before."

THE PRAYER CRAFT.

Some Caustic, and Entirely Pertinent, Comments, Et Passant.

Very few persons who have to work for a living can resist an offer of a better job and more pay. Those who labor in the Lord's vineyard go from one place to another when better pecuniary inducements are tendered. Rev. E. L. Swick, pastor of the Baptist church in South Bend, has resigned and will fill the pulpit of the First Baptist church in Olympia, with a salary of $1200 and a parsonage thrown in as a bonus. This is nearly twice the compensation he received in South Bend. In Olympia Rev. Swick is liable to discover small opportunities for graft of which he is not aware, if the same customs prevail as in other capitals. In Salem, Ore., it is customary to open the daily sessions of the senate and house with prayers. These prayers, which last about two minutes, cost the tax-payers of the State $5 each, or $2.50 per minute. The Salem preachers were so anxious for these two-minute jobs that they formed a ring to protect a few in the exclusive enjoyment of them. This caused a row among the clergy, which put the ring out of business. The senate, to show that it intended to give all the preachers a square deal, invited a coon to offer prayer. He was a fine, large, fat, shiny gentleman of color, and after prayer thought it was necessary for him to remain sitting alongside the president an hour or so in order to earn his $5, which was $2 more than a senator received for a whole day's work. As business began to warm up the preacher was found to be in the way, and every member of the senate saw that the president was up against the real thing—an honest man determined to earn his salary. The sergeant-at-arms soon discovered the dilemma the president was in, and sent a page to the colored brother who told him a friend of his in the lobby was anxious to see him at once. The senators smiled as the preacher bowed pleasantly and passed out.—Chinook Observer.

GOOD FOR HIM!

F. P. Moon, a one-armed man, came to Seaside last Spring with no money and nothing to do. He had no friends here and no one but himself to depend upon for support; nor did he need any. Moon just sized up the situation, got the privilege of cutting wood on a place close to town, bought the necessary tools and went at it. Today he is making more money than any laboring man in Seaside and can't supply all who are after him for wood. Every laboring man can't do as well as Moon has done, of course; but his experience is given as a further proof that where there is a will there is a way, even though one has but one arm.—Seaside Signal.

AGAIN!

In the game between the Browns of Astoria and Seaside yesterday afternoon at Seaside, the locals were defeated by a score of 4 to 3. Bum decisions on the part of the umpire, is the alleged cause of the Brown's defeat.

TOOK FOURTEEN CARS.

The big "A. & C." excursion from Seaside back to the metropolis last evening reached here with ten coaches and before leaving four more were taken on. The crowd numbered nearly 900 and nothing was too good for them to say about the trip and Seaside; and other evidence of the immense popularity of these weekly excursions from the hot interior to the cool coast.

NOTICE TO WATER CONSUMERS.

Monday, July 23, from 7 o'clock a. m. to 6 o'clock p. m., the water will be shut off from the mains on Bond street from Second to Eighth street on Third street, from Bond to Water streets; on Fourth street from Bond to Commercial streets; on Fifth street from Bond to Water streets; on Sixth street from Commercial to Water streets; on Seventh street from Commercial to Astor streets.

LIVE TOWN TACTICS.

In taking steps to cause the removal of all wooden awnings in Dallas, the council has set a good example by tearing down the old and dilapidated porch in front of the City Hall. The appearance of the building is so greatly improved that the people are all wondering why the porch was not removed years ago. Wooden awnings are a relic of antiquity, and when old and decayed are a constant menace to life and limb. They are also a great obstacle in the way of fire fighting, as was demonstrated in the burning of the Kirkpatrick building a few weeks ago. To the credit of the town, it should be said that there are only a few wooden awnings remaining in the business district, and as they are nearly all in a bad state of repair, their removal will occasion little loss to the owners of the buildings.—Polk County Observer.
