STEUNENBERG CASE

Clear Statement of Present Status of Affair.

NO UNDERHAND OPERATIONS

Boise Statesman Presents Facts in Case in Clear, Comprehensive Manner for Information of Outsiders—Wrong Impression Abroad.

The following article taken from the Boise (Idaho) Statesman presents the present status of the famous Steunenberg case and the facts concerning the alleged "kidnaping" of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, in the most comprehensive light and is given below:

Communications are constantly being received which reflect the extent to which misinformation has been disseminated respecting the case growing out of the assassination of former Governor Frank Steunenberg. One of these is in the form of a printed list of questions sent by an organization in New York. It is apparent that the organization sending out these questions has been influenced by a desire to learn whether the charges made against the state are well founded. Those of our people who have visited eastern points have found erroneous impressions prevailing there, this having been created by the activity of the socialists in their effort to stampee public sentiment, particularly that of working men, into an attitude of opposition to the state.

One of the charges which seems to have made a particular impression on the eastern mind is that which represents the men were kidnaped from Colorado. Nothing could be farther from the truth. When the state had secured such evidence as made it its duty to proceed against these men to determine whether they were guilty of participation in the murder, requisitions were made out in the usual manner and the Colorado executive, after looking into the matter, issued his warrants for the arrest and removal of the men. The warrants were served and the men were brought here. It is claimed their attorneys should have been sent for, but no impartial mind will agree with that plea. All that could have been done by their attorneys would have been to raise technical points and delay the removal. Officers sent after persons in other states charged with crime do not constitute themselves the special champions of the persons whom they are sent to secure. On the contrary they usually get their men into the jurisdiction of the demanding state with as little ceremony as possible. Under these circumstances no one can legitimately criticize the officers in this case for not departing from the rule, since a long siege of technical contests in court would have been invited.

The other point that seems to be most misunderstood is with respect to the delay in bringing the men to trial. It is persistently charged that the state has refused to give the accused a speedy trial and at the same time has denied them bail. The state is not responsible for the delay. It was ready and anxious to go to trial, but, by the action of the defense, it became impossible for the state court to proceed.

When the men were brought here, they went into the supreme court of the state, asking to be released on writs of habeas corpus. The application was denied and the case was carried to the supreme court of the United States. Afterward an application was made to the United States circuit court on exactly the same grounds for release on habeas corpus. The application was denied and that case was taken to the supreme court of the United States. Both cases were set for hearing on October 9. They will be heard together and decided together, both covering exactly the same points. Their exact similarity is attested by a stipulation signed for the attorneys for the defense providing that the showing and argument in one shall stand for the other also.

It was found by the attorneys for the state that a statute of the United States had been construed by the supreme court as a bar to any proceeding by a state court in any case in which habeas corpus proceedings had been instituted in a United States circuit court and were pending on appeal to the tribunal at Washington. It is thought by a good many people that the attorneys for the defense knew that and took the second appeal for the purpose of preventing an immediate trial of the case on its merits or laying the foundation for habeas corpus proceedings later, should the state proceed and convict the men prior to the determination of the pending appeal from the district court, as that was the only one that raised this bar, and thus open the way for the trial to proceed. The suggestion was declined, and the state court was obliged to defer the case until the federal supreme court had decided the cases.

The defense could have had a trial at once, had it taken down the bar, resting upon the exactly similar appeal from the state supreme court. It can have a trial at any time by taking down the bar, and without sacrificing any point or imperiling any right.

Yet these socialists and others howl that the state has refused to give the accused a speedy trial!

The men accused of the infamous murder have not been granted bail because there is no ground upon which to grant them such a favor. The state is in nowise responsible for the delay, and under the circumstances of the case itself and those surrounding, postponement of the trial the court found the men could not properly be admitted to bail. In this state bail is very seldom granted in a capital case—it is practically unheard of and no good reason has been advanced why an exception should be made in this case.

Well, Conductor Josephus Gans punched Billy Nolan's meal ticket full of holes during that long and tiresome trip the Battling Dane took on Monday afternoon and the ever-suspicious searching manager will have to henceforth delve down into the innermost depths of the ash can to procure the three portions of nourishment allotted to the average man during one revolution of the earth. Today a bunch of scientists are clustered around the countenance of the prostrate fighter who comes from the country that was made famous many years ago when a certain Kid Hamlet referred to it in terms that savored of extreme rottenness. The eminent physiognomy specialist gathered about the couch of the smashed up gladiator face is a fit specimen are trying to decide whether the Dane's face is a fit specimen to be handed over to the students who make a specialty of the jolly-fish or whether it should be awarded to the proprietor of the soup kitchen and served up as a dish of scrambled eggs.

FACE IS BEATEN TO JUCY PULP

DURABLE DANE'S PHYSIOGNOMY IS POUNEDED PAST RECOGNITION—LARRY SULLIVAN IS GREAT SUCCESS AS BUTCHER OF ENGLISH.

Nelson has become famous for the beatings he has taken in most of his battles without showing any weakness or desire to slip on a board and vanish into the crowd to escape further punishment. But in no half-dozen of his previous battles has the wired haired youth received the mauling and squashing administered by Joe Gans in that memorable forty-two round battle of two days ago. Never before in his life has Battling Nelson suffered from the sting of being unable to exert enough physical force to meet the demand of his barbaric determination. It was very evident to those at the ringside that the Dane was all in at the end of the forty-second round. One of his eyes was closed and the other was rapidly swelling. His insides were so raw that he could not utter a word to save his life. When Gans leaned over Nelson's shoulder in one of the closing rounds and very distinctly asked Nolan, "What time is it Billy?" Nelson probably thought many harsh thoughts, but not a sound was heard to come from his lacerated lips. His physical strength had almost entirely left him and he was relying solely upon his dog-like determination. If the unfortunate or, rather, rather fortunate fowl, had not occurred, Gans would surely have won. He was fighting the fight of a master and waiting until Nelson had exhausted himself.

Although many strange and laughable things happened in Goldfield that were very strange to visitors from the larger cities all over the United States, the one event that was labeled as the biggest joke by most of the spectators was Larry Sullivan's speech at the opening of hostilities. Larry has a grand voice and a wonderful supply of natural gas, but he is also one of the vilest butchers that ever swung a cleaver. The way he hacked his words out of the English language would make the bloodiest butcher in the slaughterhouse blush with shame. When Sullivan opened his mouth to shoot his rare brand of lingo into the poor unfortunates who were delegated by Fate to stand for the awful bunk, it really looked as if he were about to slide over something good in the bull line. His carriage was that of a statesman and his self possession was worthy of no lesser lights than Deacon Jones—or I mean Chauncey Depew. But, when he braced himself against one of the ring posts and let loose, old Noah Webster turned over in his grave, seventeen people choked to death from laughter, and a lynching committee was organized on the spot to convey the zephyr agent to a place where the sagebrush was the thickest and give him proper attention. He insisted on talking about something he called the "ARENNO." When he had finished most people were trying to figure out whether it was a new breakfast food or whether it was the password of some newly organized secret order. He also stated in a very masterly fashion, and with rich, rare gestures, that Tex Rickard had come to Goldfields a little over a year ago and in the course of that time has CALUMINATED over a million and a half dollars. Nobody had the courage to doubt this statement because nobody was quite Joseph to the stall. At the finish, Larry's remarks were received with great applause, which was probably excited by the fact that he was through.

Sullivan announced that President Roosevelt's son was at the ringside, but only the runs fell for the pea-and-shell talk and piped around to get a glimpse at the younger Teddy, who was probably playing a game of poker in the White House at the time.

The moving picture men had the time of their lives when the fight passed the thirty-third round mark, and the sun began to sink behind the brow of yonder hill." They had calculated that the fight would not go more than twenty rounds, but had brought enough film to carry them over thirty rounds to be on the safe side. When darkness began to come on and the fight began to look as if it would go a couple of hundred rounds, Miles Bros. saw visions of the sheriff's lock reposing over the keyhole of their front door.

They sent all over Nevada for a mile or two of film, but there was nothing within the borders of the Sage-Brush State that could even make a noise like a coil of the sensitive material. The operators finally had to stop grinding the crank and canvass the audience to find a couple of ringers who could pose as Gans and Nelson for the last twelve rounds of the fight. Verily, there is hard luck in every game.—R. S. Goldberg, in S. F. Bulletin.

LONG'S REMARKS DISLIKED.

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 7.—A recent address by former Secretary of the Navy John D. Long in which he discussed the Pilgrim Fathers, was the subject of critical comment on the part of nearly all the speakers at the banquet of the general society of the Mayflower Descendants last night. Samuel B. Capen of Boston, the governor general of the society, referred to ex-Governor Long's conclusions as unwarranted. Mr. Morton Dexter of Boston said to all intents and purposes, Mr. Long charged the Pilgrims with being hypocrites. "For my part," said Mr. Dexter, "I absolutely repudiate any such conclusion in regard to them."

AERONAUT RISKS LIFE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Oconto, Wis., says: After drifting helplessly 14 miles, 2,000 feet above the earth in an airship he could not control, William Mattery, a Chicago aeronaut who made an ascension from here last night, disappeared from view. When last seen Mattery's unmanageable aerial craft was hovering uncertainly over Green Bay, still buoyant and drifting out over Lake Michigan. Mattery made the ascension against his judgment, knowing that the machinery had been broken and spliced. But the crowds, eager to see a man risk his life, declared that the story of the broken propeller shaft was a ruse to avoid making an ascension. Therefore Mattery went up just to "make good."

SIX MEXICANS KILLED.

MERIDA, Sept. 7.—The parting of a cable on the British steamer Halls in the port of Progreso, brought instant death to six men Wednesday. They were in a small boat alongside the steamer, which was being unloaded, when several tons of boxed machinery broke from the hoists and crashed down squarely on top of the small boat. Two were rescued unhurt. It is understood that the boat will be detained in port until an official investigation can be made of the accident, which has excited much comment. All the dead are Mexicans.

APPEARANCES

Often a person is sized up by his appearance; by the tone that surrounds him. And more often a business house is sized up by the stationary it uses. A cheap letter head or a poor bill head gives a mighty poor first impression and makes business harder to transact. Good printing costs no more than poor printing. The first impression is half the battle in business. You wouldn't employ a "sloppy" salesman; why put up with "sloppy" stationery, that gives a wrong impression of the importance of your business. Let us do your printing and help you to make that ten strike.
