to Notorious Matrimonial Shark Who Has Fleeced no Less Than Nine Husbands.

LONDON, Dec. 31 .- Who is Miss a London setting-indeed, a continental environment-which has drawn the interest of half a dozen of the great capitals to its dramatic unfoldings. So far, the developments have led only toward more imponetrable depths of plot and action, and the authorities are more and more "in the air" at each succeeding turn. But as detective patience and sagacity are only whetted by the fact that the task takes on a more difficult aspect from day to day. in the end the amazing person now that has stopped fast driving." known as plain Miss Smith will doubtless find hers if unmasked.

It is the story of a matrimonial agency-of a Mme. Guerin and her train of hetresses and dupes. One of the latter was Dr. Paul Hebert, a Lonphysician becoming engaged through the good offices of Mme. Guerin to the mysterious Miss Smith Dr. Herbert was lured to a villa in the vicinity of Paris and treacherously shot by M. Cesbron, who was Mmc. Guerin's husband. Dr. Herbert was not dead, as the assassin thought, and he police, M. Cesbron disappeared, but Mme. Guerin was arrested. She related that both Hebert and Cesbron were in love with Miss Smith, and that the shooting at the villa was due to jealousy. Dr. Herbert received many letters from Miss Smith, all of them couched in the most affectionate language. M. Sudro, who was taken to London and introduced to Miss Smith, was told she was the unacknowleged daughter of a duke with a half a million pounds in the Bank of England. He too, has letters from her breathing passionate devotion. Other young fools who advertised to marry helresses have turned over similar love epistles to the police. These letters now turn out to be the handwriting of Mme. Guerin, slightly disguised. The sentence of four years imposed on Voight the "robber captain" of Koepenick, by an unromantic German tribunal mosts with no nopular sympathy in England. Volght's exploit is holding up a town set the whole world brughing, and the result of the trial climax to a brilliant adventure. It is nor surprising that the popular sympathy goes out to the prisoner. A man who beings might into a gray world is made his way back to Paris and the a public benefactor. Voight is some thing of a rascal, no doubt; but his superb audacity and his fertility in resource almost make one forget his morat deliquencies. Besides adding to the gayety of nations, he has brought home to the thoughtful Germans the absurdity of making a fetish of the Kalser's coat. Voight seems to have been dogged by a relentless fate. More than once he turned from a criminal career to live an honest life, and employers for whom he worked gave him an excellent character. But his dead past rose up always to wreck his hope the police he was still a criminal and as such a person to be hunted from pillar to post. In four months he was teld to move on ten times, and he simply found it impossible to live down his past.
