PROVE IT ANYTIME

By the Evidence of the Astoria People.

The daily evidence citizens right here at home supply is proof sufficient to satisfy the greatest skeptic. No better proof can be had. Here is a case. Read it:
Mrs. Helen Lewis, of 52 Astor Street, Astoria, Ore., says: "Doan's Ointment proved its healing qualities several years ago when I used it and told in a published statement the great relief and cure I obtained from it. I used it for a breaking out around my mouth and lips which had troubled me for a number of years, despite all I could do to get rid of it. My lips would crack and become sore when cold weather set in, and this lasted until it got warm again. I was finally induced to try Doan's Ointment, procuring it at Charles Roger's drug store. In a short time after beginning to apply it I was cured of the annoyance, and have been entirely free from it since."
For sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.
Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

GOTHAM'S FAVORITE FLOWER

Sons of Elsewhere To Erect A $14,000,000 Structure Will Be A National Affair Congress and State Legislatures to Be Asked To Contribute.

One of the most interesting events of the last week was the Stanford White art sale, such art treasures have seldom before, if ever, come under the hammer of an American auctioneer.

For it was in his own house that Stanford White was to be seen as a great connoisseur. His treasures were bought in ever corner of Europe, and chosen because of their fitness and beauty, and not because someone else had told him to buy them. The world could see his taste in art decorations in public places like the Madison Squar Garden, or in the many houses of the wealthy which were furnished under his direction. But in his own home he felt absolutely untrammelled to give his fancy full rein. His love for the beautiful was not influenced by the necessary for manifesting ostentatious wealth, as was the case in many of the homes he was called upon to decorate. One could not but feel regret that such a remarkable collection could be scattered to half a hundred homes to be "Mixed with baser matter." Although there were many of the curious present to see the home of Thaw's victim, the sale was by card admission and the majority were genuine art lovers attracted by the legitimate purpose of the sale. It would require an expert to describe the many beautiful art objects, and columns to contain the description. Some of the most striking objects were a superb Creolan first century vase of carved marble, standing five feet high and three feet in diameter; a huge Florentine sixteenth century tapestry, worked after cartoons by Raphael; the dining room ceiling, bought out of an old chapel in Florence—a specimen of the Italian Renaissance, of deep, richly carved wood, heavy and ornate, the wood tinted and the whole enriched with with painted canvas panels of Biblical subjects; and a superb Italian Renaissance carved marble fire-place.

A permanent national building to cost fourteen million dollars, wherein to house a national theatre, a national library, national art salon, banquet hall, and an exhibition hall and luxurious club rooms for each of the various state societies having headquarters in New York, is the ambitious scheme propounded by these Sons of Elsewhere for the education and uplifting of the native Gothamite. Mr. William J. Worden of Michigan modestly admits that he is the father of the movement, which was first discussed publicly and enthusiastically at the recent annual dinner of the Michigan society at the Hotel Astor. An inter-state organization is forming to take charge of the movement, which promises, so it is said, to ripen into a speedy success. Congress at its next session will be asked to appropriate $5,000,000 toward the cost of the enterprise, and each state legislature will be asked to contribute $200,000 to the same end. It is argued in support of the scheme that most of the people who live in New York, as well as a quarter of a million visitors daily, are from other places anyway, and that such a monument to the greatness of elsewhere staring the haughty native sternly in the eye from some prominent corner of Fifth Avenue, would do much to teach him how little he really counts and foster that feeling of proprietorship and superiority so inadequately expressed at the annual talk-fests of the various state societies.

In view of the appeal of a delegation of New York clergymen to President Roosevelt to aid them in inducing the people of the metropolis to attend religious services it is interesting to note that there is one church in New York that is not troubled with the problem of filling its pews, perhaps for the reason that it is an altogether new kind of church, based upon the doctrine of the brotherhood and interdependence of man, and uniting all creeds while advocating none. The "People's Church," as it is called flourishes in the midst of New York's teeming East Side population, under the auspices of the people's Institute. Its meetings are held during twenty-five or thirty weeks of the year in the large hall of Cooper Union, and not infrequently the attendance is two thousand or more. In this unique church the personal views of the speaker upon controversial religious questions are never sought to be impressed, not only for the reason that the rules forbid any attempt at proselyting or any attack of creed upon creed, but the audience enjoys the unique privilege of answering back; and the clergyman who speaks for the first time from Cooper Union platform faces the novelty of having crude thought or inept statements challenged, and perhaps refuted, by some one of his hearers. According to the statement of Professor Charles Sprague Smith, founder and director of the Institute, an occasional roll call of the audience by "isms" discloses of every phase, single taxers, and adherents of every creed under the sun as well as adherents of no creeds at all.

New Yorkers spend more money for flowers and elaborate floral designs than any other of America's buyers, and the combined profits of its florists are said to amount to $4,000,000. There are 20,000 florists in the United States and an estimate of the money spent each year for cultivated flowers, is $100,000,000, a sum equal to one-fifth the value of all the coal mines last year, or one-fourth the surplus in national banks of the country, and almost equal to the net earnings of those banks. The citizens of Newport, Cincinnati, and St. Louis, pay $1,000,000, and $2,000,000 is spent annually in Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The popular flowers in the wealthy homes of Fifth Avenue and the vicinity, are, first, roses, then carnations, of which thousands are used every day for dinner-table decorations, chrysanthemums and violets. The great popular types, however, are pansies and geraniums, and in these first warm days of spring the window gardens of the tenements blaze with their rich hues. A thousand men are constantly employed in producing roses for the New York market, and the cost of transporting them from the farms to the city amounts to more than $50,000 in the course of a year.
