ILL FATED MODELS.

Odd Story of Seyne's Painting "Mystery of Life." Invested with tragedy is the story of George I, Seyne's "Mystery of Life." in the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art.

"Three models," the artist told a friend, "were lost during the making of it. It became next to impossible for me to finish it.

"I had sketched out the plan and had practically completed the figure of the old man in the grotto. Then I began work on the figure of the girl. The model I selected was a particularly beautiful young woman and one who understood to a nicety the methods of nearly five years.

"The picture was begun in the spring, and I had been at work on the woman's figure barely a week when my model stayed away one day to go on a yachting trip. From this she never returned. The boat capsized, and all on board were drowned. So true to the subject of the painting was this incident that I turned the canvas to the wall, unable to continue the work. "More than a year passed, and one day the old gentleman who posed for the other figure asked me about the picture. I explained to him that I had been unable to continue with the work, After some reasoning he persuaded me to his figure and decided to continue the work, after persuading myself that this morbid state of mind caused by the incident of a year previous was more or less due now to a bad case of Indigestion

"The next day I began work with a new model. Scarcely two weeks had passed when this girl caught cold in my studio, was stricken with pneumonin, and before the month was out she

"Horror stricken, I turned the canvas again to the wall and declared that never again would I touch it.

"Many times would I look at it and long to complete it, but the work was at such a stage that a model was necessary, and my superstition conquered. So I refrained from taking up the

"One day many months afterward I left a model alone in the studio. Her curiosity prompted her to look at some canvases stacked against the wall. This one took her fancy. She saw it was unfinished, and, to my amazement, when I returned the picture was standing on the easel.

"'I want to pose for that,' she said, as I entered.

"'But it is impossible. Neither you nor any one else shall ever pose for

"'But it is a great subject. You must finish it-you must!" "So insistent was she that I finally yielded, and she posed for me. I never saw a model so interested in the prof ress of a painting. She could scarcely Nuts-Walnuts, No. 1, soft shell, 17@ walt to see it finished. At last it was 18c; No. 1 hard shell, 15 @ 16c.; al- completed, and I rejoiced to think that
