INLAND WATERWAYS

Immense Undeveloped Resources of America's Rivers. RELIEVE FREIGHT SITUATION Mississippi River Empty 675,000 Cubic Feet of Water Every Second Into Gulf of Mexico—Work of Rivers and Harbors Committee.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—It has just dawned on the country that the work cut out for Congressman Burton and Inland Waterways Commission will be his colleagues on the appointed enormous. In all the discussion of the navigable waterways of the United States, little has been said or written that would disclose their vast reaches. The inland streams of the United States are in keeping with the wonderful distances of the country. As avenues of transportation they are a marvelous system in themselves.

It is not generally known that the total navigable distance of the Mississippi River extends over a space of 2,161 miles for the average steamers, and 2,237 miles for smaller craft. Taking into consideration the tributaries of the Father of Waters, these combined would make a river system 13,160 miles long, through which a good-sized steamer could make its way. Some idea of the distance these figures convey can be gained only by comparison. It is astonishing to find that it is slightly greater than from New York to Bangkok by way of London. If the steamer were driven by powerful engines, and made a continuous trip, it might complete the journey in about fifty days. However, if it were compelled to make as many stops as fall to the share of the average river steamer, this time would be greatly lengthened.

These figures are for the Mississippi River and its tributaries alone. The splendid reaches of the Columbia River and the mileage of scores of other navigable streams emptying into the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and the Gulf of Mexico, are not taken into consideration. With this mileage added, the navigable rivers of the United States are the wonders of the world. A faint idea of the immense volume of water that sweeps through the Mississippi valley may be gained from the fact that every second the Mississippi River pours into the Gulf of Mexico 675,000 cubic feet of water. For more than a quarter of a century this great volume of water has served little to advance the cause of Commerce. The government, instead of harnessing the great tide and making it bear on its bosom fleet of freight carrying steamers, has been content to fight its encroachment on farming lands, regarding it rather a destructive agency than as a great factor in the advancement of the country's prosperity.

With the appointment of the Inland Waterways Commission, and the passage of a big appropriation bill for waterways improvement by the last Congress, this policy is about to be changed. The freight congestion that has paralyzed the railroads and has gripped the Commerce of the whole United States, has driven the Federal government into taking steps for the creation of another means of transportation. This decision was reached only after coal famines caused untold suffering throughout the Northwest, and the agricultural states found themselves financially embarrassed in the midst of plenty, because of the inability of the railroads to carry their products to market, while the manufacturing states felt the same embarrassment, because of the impossibility of getting delivery of raw materials.

Large credit is due to the National Rivers & Harbors Congress for the belated recognition of the waterways as a means for relieving transportation distress. The organization, which has been at work for five years bringing the matter to the attention of the country, is non-political and lends its powerful influence to no individual scheme for betterment. It stands for a general campaign of waterways improvement, and has contended unhesitatingly that not less than $50,000,000 a year should be expended by the government in this important work of internal improvement.

CAPT. HATHAWAY EXONERATED. Pilot Was In Complete Charge—Captain Not Blamed For Mongolia Disaster. SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—Captain R. H. Hathaway, who was in command of the Mongolia, when she went aground in the Shimonoseki Straits, Japan, a few weeks ago, has been exonerated by United States steamship inspectors O. F. Bolles and J. K. Bulger. In view of an affidavit from the pilot, showing that he was in complete charge, it was held that no blame could attach to the captain. "Our little boy had eczema for five years," writes N. A. Adams, Henrietta, Pa. "Two of our home doctors said the case was hopeless, his lungs being affected. We then employed other doctors but no benefit resulted. By chance we read about Electric Bitters; bought a bottle and soon noticed improvement. We continued this medicine until several bottles were used, when our boy was completely cured." Best of all blood medicines and body building health tonic. Guaranteed at Charles Rodgers's drug store. 50c.
