MEAT PRICES TO ADVANCE

Packers Have Notified Commission Firms
That They Will No Longer Stand Loss
By Government Inspection—Commission Claim Movement Will Spread

CHICAGO, May 27.—Meat prices in this city may jump skyward this week unless the "beef trust" recedes from its recently announced intention to delay purchases until they have passed the government post mortem examination. The packers notified the Commission firms that beginning today they no longer would stand the loss on condemned cattle, in order to protect themselves they had found it necessary to refuse payment on "cow stuff" until it has passed the Government inspectors.

During the latter part of last week thousands of letters and telegrams were sent out by the commission house to their customers notifying them of the action that had been taken by the packers and advising them to withhold all shipments of cattle to the big markets controlled by the trust until the difficulty is adjusted. This is ex-

EDUCATE CONGRESS

"Send Congress to School," Says
Professor James.

A NATIONAL UNIVERSITY

Head of the University of Illinois Endorses the Efforts of the George Washington University—Believes It Would Aid in Purification of Politics.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—"Send Congress school," practically is the burden of a remarkable letter written by Prof. Edmund J. James, President of the University of Illinois, endorsing the effort being made to establish a national university in Washington. The letter was addressed to the trustees of the George Washington University, who are working to the end that their institution may fill this niche, thus carrying out the wishes of the first President of the United States as contained in his last will. Prof. James believes that the presence of a university here would work immense good in the purification of national politics.

In addition, the Illinois educator sees in such an institution of learning a means for the upbuilding of a trained and efficient consular service, thus raising the prestige of the United States abroad and insuring this country even a greater measure of the world's trade. The George Washington University established a department of this kind in June 1893, which was formally opened in November of that year. It is known as the department of politics and diplomacy and a number of its graduates are already holding important positions abroad under the government.

With reference to the effect of a national university upon Congress, Prof. James says:

Another great advantage of such a school as this, located in the capital, would be its powerful influence on Congress as a whole in the direction of scientific treatment of all political and economic questions. Such a school, with a faculty consisting of able experts in all the different lines of government policy and administration, would inevitably exert an immediate and helpful influence upon the country and upon the attitude of our Congressmen and our government as a whole.

Washington is the natural place for such a center of scientific investigation. There, also, is the center from which the most important influences may be most immediately expected upon politicians and statesmen alike and raise the level of their thinking and their action.

In the struggle for commercial supremacy among the great nations of the world, President James realizes to its full the great advantage such a school would lend. Not alone in the foreign service is this true, but in all of the various branches of government. In his letter he says:

A great school of this kind would prepare men for the public service as at present no men are prepared in the United States. The existence of such a school and the preparation which its graduates would have call the attention of the Federal Administration to the fact that it could obtain competent men for any administrative position within its gift, and the supply of men with such training, would create a their services.

This is just now the tragic moment, owing to the fact that a law has been passed reorganizing, re-forming and, in many respects, putting upon a sounder basis the consular service of the United States. The present law will inevitable work in the direction of providing a trained consular service; but to carry this idea out to an adequate and desirable extent it will be necessary to have some center where these men may be properly trained. At present no such center exists in this country. In such a school of politics and diplomacy, located in Washington, would be found the ideal place to acquire this particular training.

It would appear at first glance that Prof. James is visionary in entertaining the belief that the university would have such a decided effort upon Congress and the Administration. Prominent educators and a number of statesmen, however, point out that already The George Washington University is so closely affiliated with the government by reason of the fact that it counts as members of its faculty a large number of government scientists, that it has demonstrated its usefulness to the Administration. This usefulness is seen most plainly in the adoption by the government of scientific discoveries made in the university's laboratories and in the development of its scientists along new lines. While the government archives afford the university rich mines of information, nevertheless the university faculty and students really are the miners, digging out the nuggets of knowledge and preparing them to be put to a useful purpose.

THE GOULD CASE

Mrs. Gould in Conference With Commissioner Bingham.

HUMMEL INVOLVED IN CASE

Notorious Divorce Lawyer Wrote To
Mrs. Gould Offering His Services and Telling of Detectives On Case—Investigation To Continue.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Announcement was made today that Mrs. Howard Gould met Chief of Police Commissioner Bingham, yesterday for the first time since charges had been made against the detective bureau in connection with the separation suit brought by Mrs. Gould against her husband Howard Gould. Mrs. Gould met General Bingham with her attorney, Clarence Sheehan and a woman friend. For the best interests of the investigation it was decided to hold the meeting elsewhere. No statement regarding what occurred at the meeting has been vouchsafed, but it is said she told in detail a story of constant espionage by City Detectives for nearly a year. A new feature in Mrs. Gould's story was a statement said to have been made her Abraham Hummel the lawyer, telling her that he had learned that police detectives were following her, and offering his services as attorney. How Hummel learned of the police activity in the case is not known. Commissioner Bingham will resume his investigation of the case today, notwithstanding the fact that Former Police Inspector McLaughlin, who is charged with directing the activity of the detectives in the Gould case, retired from the police department on his own application at midnight last night.

The investigation into the police department was started by charges that detectives had been used in the Gould separation case. It developed today that in the allegations made by Mrs. Howard Gould, she had received anonymous letters which disclosed a plot to poison her. It is said Mrs. Gould told Police Commissioner Bingham of the latter, which it is declared by the police, was from an illiterate person.
