Young Boy Watches Surgeon Amputate His Right Arm.

VIENNA, May 31.—A 14-year-old boy here has astonished the prominent surgeon, Baron von Eislerberg, by the remarkable grit he displayed in undergoing an operation. The boy's arm had to be amputated. He refused to take anesthetic because he wanted to watch the operation. The boy did not wince and made no sound throughout, but watched the surgeon's work with keen attention. He said afterward that the sight was well worth the pain. Dr. von Eislerberg recognized his pluck by giving him a watch.

PRESIDENT AT LANSING

Cabbage Patch, just as much as from any formal treatise on charity; you will learn as much sound social and industrial doctrine from Octave Thanet's stories of farmers and wage-earners as from avowed sociological and economic studies; and I cordially recommend the first chapter of 'Aunt Jane of Kentucky' for use as a tract in all families where the men folks tend to selfish or thoughtless or overbearing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, or doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear one another's burdens; and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fiber necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of all relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and the mother, 'who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests.'

CATS' WHISKERS.

These Sensitive Organs Are a Relief of Jungle Days.

It is perhaps not generally known that a cat's power of discernment, especially at night, is due almost as much to his whiskers as to his eyes. To any one who goes to a menagerie and looks at the giant cats of the forest—the lion and his like—the purpose of these vibrissae, as science names the hairs that project from the muzzle and from above the eyes, is evident enough.

They are delicate organs of touch, wonderful mechanisms of warning. Each one grows from a follicle, or gland, nerved to exquisite sensibility. Its slightest contact with any obstacle is distinctly felt by the animal, though the hair itself is tough and insensible. Those exaggerated whiskers on the muzzle often project to each side of the animal so far that from point to point they stretch to just the width of his body.

Imagine, now, a lion stealing through a jungle at night, tracking his prey, where the stir of a twig gives alarm. His long hairs indicate through the thicket where the rustling leaves and boughs would tell aloud his presence. Wherever his head may be thrust without a warning from the vibrissae there his body may pass noiselessly, and it is their aid, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, that enables him to travel as silently as the snake.—Scrap Book.

The Eagle.

According to Washington Irving, the Delaware Indians had a superstitious reverence for the eagle, believing that a guardian spirit in the form of this bird watched over them, hovering in the sky far out of sight. When pleased with their actions, he sent abundant crops and made them have great success in hunting, but when displeased he would vent his rage in the thunder, which was his voice, and the lightning, which was the flashing of his eye, and strike dead the object of his displeasure. They also believed that the feathers of this bird would render the wearer invisible and invulnerable.

HUSBAND DIED OF GRIEF.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., May 31.—Mrs. Guy Gleason, a bride less than a year ago, died suddenly at Corona last night. A few hours later her husband in a frenzy of grief suffered a hemorrhage of the brain and died almost instantly.

CINCINNATI SUICIDE.

Man Jumps Into Furnace To End His Life.

CINCINNATI, May 31.—Either a most atrocious murder or a remarkable suicide was revealed in the furnace-room of the Ryan soap factory this morning when Engineer John McDermitt dragged the charred body of an unidentified man from the fire. The flesh was burned from the face and head and the arms burned to stumps.

McDermitt was arrested. He started the fire and went home, across the street to breakfast. He returned and found a strange coat and hat hanging by the door and saw a pair of legs protruding from the furnace door.

The coroner's investigation disclosed a fracture of the skull. The morgue superintendent says that it is highly improbable that the body was taken from the furnace this morning, as it was not hot when received.
