THE BOISE TRIAL

STEUNENBERG'S SON IN COURT

Murdered Governor's Son Sits Within A Few Feet Of Orchard And Attentively Watches Trial Closely—Defense Still Looking For Loophole In Testimony.

BOISE, Idaho, June 13.—It now seems probable that Harry Orchard, who has laid the foundation for the charge against W. D. Haywood, will be allowed to leave the stand and make way for another witness by Saturday afternoon. The state will not take up much time with the re-direct and this means that the re-cross examination will quickly be disposed of. Today Orchard will give the details of the assassination of Former Governor Steunenberg. The harrowing tale that made a crowded court room shudder must once more be told and the murderer will be obliged to show to the jury how cold-blooded and how cruel were the preparations and the deed itself. The murdered man's son sits within a few feet of Haywood and facing Orchard. He watches the witness closely and during the narration of the scenes around his home prior to the murder and on the night when his father was killed, he shows evidence of great nervousness.

The defense has not spared Orchard. His character as a criminal has developed until almost every crime in the calendar big and little has been brought home to him. The most remarkable thing about the man is the absolute nonchalance with which he admits to the commission of these crimes. "You committed burglary?" said Mr. Richardson.

"I do not just know what you mean by burglary," replied Orchard. "I mean that you broke open a railroad depot and stole a trunk," explained the cross-examiner. "Oh, yes; I did that," Orchard said without the slightest hesitation or change of tone.

The plot to kidnap the children of Orchard's former partner in the Hercules mine prospect is looked upon by the defense as a strong proof of the duplicity of the man. The claim of the defense is that Simpkins discovered the plot and warned August Paulson. Paulson has been subpoenaed by the state. It was shown however, by the defense in cross examination that Paulson loaned Orchard $300 just before he left Wallace for Caldwell, shortly before the murder of Steunenberg.

The case for the defense, in contradiction of the connection of Haywood with the actual murder or arrangements for the murder of Steunenberg, is shown by the questions put so as to bring out evidence to show that Orchard reached Wallace planning to kidnap Paulson's children. Failing that, he came poverty stricken, and committed burglary. Getting no proceeds from this, he robbed a cash register. These funds running out, he borrowed $300 from the man who had been his partner and who had become rich from the proceeds of the mine, a sixteenth share of which Orchard had sold for a song and then, envious of the rich man, and angered at the thought that Steunenberg had driven him, in common with other union men, from the state, he planned the entire rise of vengeful assassination.

The defense assert that Simpkins was at Wallace at the time in line with his duties as a member of the legislative board of the Western Federation and that neither there nor at Caldwell had he any direct connection with Orchard's plans.

The state will begin the corroborative testimony next week. About 150 witnesses will be here to give evidence in support of Orchard's testimony. It is understood also that certain documentary evidence will be produced, but the nature of this has been kept a complete secret. Former Governor Peabody, who reached Boise last night, takes the position that he cannot talk about the case until after he has been on the stand. According to Orchard he was in danger of assassination for a long time and was hunted with bomb and pump-gun both in Denver and at his home in Canyon City, Colo. The former governor is a big man, showing no evidence that he stands in fear of anybody. He admits that threatening letters are not an unusual thing with him, but he laughingly turns off any direct answer to questions as to his opinions of the many narrow escapes related by Orchard.

The case for the defense will be conducted by Clarence Darrow of Chicago. It was agreed between counsel for the defense that Mr. Richardson should have the star witness for cross examination and Mr. Darrow says that Mr. Richardson will cross examine some of the other witnesses. The direct examination of the witnesses for the defense will be by Darrow, who will have the closing argument.

REWARDED FOR FINE SHOOTING. Every Member of Boston's Crew to Receive Gold Pin.

SAN DIEGO, June 12.—The 225 men who compose the crew of the cruiser Boston are each to receive a pin as an indication of the triumph of the cruiser over the rest of the Navy in the target practice. The pin will be of gold and enamel, showing a small target, with the inscription, "U. S. Boston, '07." The Boston secured a score of 79,997, which far exceeded anything known to the naval world. With eleven shots in one minute at a target two miles distant and the cruiser moving at the rate of ten miles per hour, these men placed every shot within the 15-foot square which represented the target, and out of the eleven hits, nine of them were bullseyes.
