HOST ARRIVES BY BALLOON.

Frenchman Invites Friends to Hunt With Him and Springs a Surprise.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—A few years ago a New York artist, who was credited with being old-fashioned and unprogressive, used to look out of his studio window and say that it would be only a little while before people stepped out of windows into airships to make calls. France at any rate will fulfill the prophecy soon at the rate of progress she is making.

Perhaps not the most spectacular, but certainly the most elegant use so far made of an airship was by M. Deutsch de la Meurthe, who invited several friends to hunt on his estate. He fixed a rendezvous and said he would arrive there by balloon. The guests assembled at the appointed hour, and saw a balloon. The guests assembled at the appointed hour and saw a balloon approaching. When it arrived over the rendezvous it descended easily, and M. Deutsch, attired in hunting costume, dismounted.

The balloon, in charge of his engineers, then re-ascended. Sometime later word came to the hunting party that the airship had returned safely to its point of departure.

WIRELESS POLICE CALL.

City Electrician of Berkeley, Cal., Working for Better Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—Charles N. Parmenter, assistant city electrician of Berkeley, who has completed the erection of a wireless pole on the site for the new town hall, is experimenting with a phone to call policemen from their beats to police alarm boxes. A simple apparatus of contact form which policemen will carry in their pockets or on their hats will revolutionize the police and fire alarm systems. The apparatus in the office of the chief of police is, however, more complicated.

The chief turns on the current of his batteries, and wireless messages are sent in all directions. The invisible currents come into contact with the coil which the patrolmen will carry in their hats, and the message is sent to them. The message is sent in dots and dashes. Though a policeman may not understand the communication, he will know he is wanted by the ringing of the bell in his pocket. He then will hasten to the nearest police box and telephone the police station, and find out what is wanted.

INSPECTOR'S DARING STUNT

Captain Werlich is Second Man Ever to Perform Dangerous Feat—Calmness of Sea Tempted Him to Try Difficult Landing.

Captain P. J. Werlich has the honor of being the second man who ever stepped from a small boat to Tillamook Rock, having performed the feat Thursday while going ashore to inspect the lighthouse station. Only on two known occasions the sea has been so rough at that point that every person landing had to step from a boat to a cage in which he would be hoisted to the rock. Major W. C. Langfitt formerly in charge of the corps of United States engineers at Portland, was the first to make a landing there without being carried up in the cage.

While at the Rock Thursday, Captain Werlich says there was scarcely a ripple on the sea and he decided to take advantage of the favorable conditions by going ashore afoot and scaling the side of the promontory to the station situated on the summit. In crossing the Columbia River bar the same day, he says that hardly a stir could be seen in the water, and had he not been so familiar with it he would not have known where the bar began or ended.
