PRIMITIVE ANCHORS.

Stones and Wooden Tubes Filled With Lead First Used.

There appear to be two ideas which have led up to the invention of the modern anchor—first, that of attaching the vessel by means of a rope or chain to a weight sufficiently heavy to keep the vessel from moving when the weight has sunk to the bottom of the sea, and, second, that of using a hook instead of or in addition to the weight, so as to catch in the bottom. The English word anchor is practically the same as the Latin ancora and the Greek ankura, meaning "that which has an angle," from the root ank, bent.

The earliest anchors made on the hook principle probably only had one fluke instead of two. In the "Sussex Archaeol. Coll." there is an illustration of what has been surmised to be an anchor made out of the natural forked branch of a tree. It was found with an ancient British canoe at Burgham, Sussex. There is in the British museum an interesting leaden anchor with two flukes bearing a Greek inscription. Its date is about 60 B. C., and it was found off the coast of Cyrene.

The invention of the anchor with two flukes is attributed by Pausanias to Midas, by Pliny to Eupalamos and by Strabo to Anacharis. Diodorus Siculus states that the first anchors were wooden tubes filled with lead, while another classical writer says that before the introduction of metal anchors lumps of stone with a hole through the middle for the attachment of the cable were used.

The form of the anchors used by the Greeks and Romans is well known from representations on Trajan's column and in the catacombs at Rome as an early Christian symbol. This form does not seem to have changed materially for quite a thousand years, as is shown by the Bayeux tapestry.

The Girls Were Still One Ahead. A young and bashful professor was frequently embarrassed by jokes his girl pupils would play on him. These jokes were so frequent that he decided to punish the next perpetrators, and the result of this decision was that two girls were detained an hour after school and made to work some difficult problems as punishment.

It was the custom to answer the roll call with quotations, so the following morning, when Miss A.'s name was called, she rose and, looking straight in the professor's eye, repeated, "With all thy faults I love thee still," while Miss B.'s quotation was, "The hours I spend with thee, dear heart, are as a string of pearls to me."—Ladies' Home Journal.

One Way.

"Pop, how is gas made?" "Well—er—the gas companies simply make light of the consumer's complaints."—Philadelphia Press.

For A' That. An American official in England tells the following as illustrative of a well known Scotch characteristic: Upon his accession to the throne of Norway, King Haakon VII. was appointed colonel in chief of a certain Scotch regiment. While dressing for parade duty an enthusiastic subaltern was communicating this information to a fellow soldier:

"McDonald," said he, "have you heard that the new king of Norway has been appointed colonel of the regiment?"

"Indeed?" queried the Scot. "That's a verra fine thing now. But will he be able to keep both jobs?"—Harper's Weekly.

Friendly Advice. "Much of my success in life," said the millionaire, "was due to the advice of my friends."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed the skeptical person. "Yes," replied the man of millions. "I always listened to it, but never followed it."—Chicago News.
