The Star Theatre.

The Star Theatre changed its program last night, and despite the inclement weather, a large audience was present. Tommy Finn, the first number, is a singing comedian who tells some funny stories. Dick Hutchins, the new baritone, who sings illustrated songs made an immediate hit, in his song "In the Golden Autumn Time, Sweet Elaine." He has a pleasing voice and the audience last night insisted on an encore, to become a favorite. Bill Gumby, who has become favorite. Billy Gumby, who has been retained this week, made good with his audience. His buck and wing dancing is well worth seeing.

The Qubey Bros., the Roman triangle gymnasts, do an excellent turn that is appreciated.

A novelty performance is that of the Tuxedo Quartette, supported by Nina Raymond and E. D. Cloud. They produce a musical playlet "In the Heart of the Philippines," that catches the audience. The singing of the quartette was encored three times. This act will make a great hit. The moving pictures this week are good. The Cosmopolitan Dancers and "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight" are the titles, and they are very enjoyable.

Manager Fritz announces that a change of program will hereafter be made on Monday and Thursday of each week, the next change being on Thursday night of this week.

SIGNAL SOCIAL EVENT OF ASTORIA'S WINTER SEASON—FIRST METHODIST CHURCH SCENE OF THE WEDDING.

Despite the warm, gentle, yet persistent fall of the first, grateful rain of the season, last evening the quaint auditorium of the First Methodist Church, in this city, was crowded to its utmost limit with hundreds of Astorians eager to witness the ceremonies incident to the happy union of Miss Susan Hurd Elmore, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Elmore, of this city, and Mr. Frita Howard Harradon, of Washington, D. C., a notable majority being almost life-long friends and acquaintances of the well-known family of the bride. Every pioneer family in the city was represented, and a large concourse of Portland friends was in evidence, having arrived down on the noon express on this pleasant errand.

The church was a mass of gleaming white and green, magnificent white chrysanthemums and asparagus ferns being the predominant elements of decoration. chancel, aisles, windows, and arches being garnished lavishly and with grace that accentuated the event of which they were conspicuous tributes.

The organ was in the accomplished hands of Miss Kate Flavel who presided in the place of her sister, Miss Flavel, who was, unhappily, indisposed. The music of the evening was most delightfully rendered and the interim precedent to the arrival of the wedding party was manifestly lightened by the contributions from this delightful source.

Precisely at the appointed hour of 8:30, the noble strains of "Mendelssohn's Wedding March" pealed forth, as the bridal party entered the church and under the leadership of the groomsmen, Messrs. H. Holland, Arnold S. Rothwell, Duncan A. McLean and A. A. Finch, swept up the central aisle, the radiant bride, gowned in superb white satin and softly veiled, leaning upon the arm of her father, Mr. Samuel Elmore; Miss Floretta Elmore serving her sister as maid of honor, the bridesmaids being Elsie Elmore, Stella Dunbar Ford and Gertrude M. Finch. The groom was attended by Mr. W. D. Skinner, as best man, and the group was met at the chancel rail by Rev. Mr. Rarick, pastor of the church, and Rev. Dr. E. D. Huntley, of Washington, an uncle of the bride, who had crossed the continent for the express purpose of taking part in this happy ceremony.

In the hands of these reverend gentlemen the beautiful marriage service of the Methodist faith lost nothing of its dignity and potential charm, and at the end of 20 minutes the gracious event of the hour was over and the principals led the counter-movement to the long line of carriages that thronged Exchange and Eleventh street waiting to transport them, with their invited guests, to the beautiful and hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmore, at 385 Grand avenue.

Here Mr. and Mrs. Harradon received kinsmen and friends, and the gracious earnest of those who wished them the best, and most, of all that is worth having in life, and after the reception, a lovely luncheon was indulged in, the bride's table being charmingly conspicuous in its decorations of white cosmos and maiden-hair ferns, the general scheme of floral embellishment throughout the drawing-rooms and halls being pink and white cosmos.

This delightful affair signally opens the winter social season in this city and will be long and pleasantly remembered by all who had the pleasure of witnessing it, not the least of whom, perhaps, are those happy couples of Astoria but lately wedded themselves, and those whose weddings are socially announced and yet to come off, many of whom in both groups, were observed in the great throng at the church last night.
