Legend of St. Mary's Bell.

at Breslau, the capital of Silesia, or. rather, a new version of it, for there are a number of versions, including one in verse by the German poet Mul-ler. Since the bell was cast more than 500 years ago, it is not likely that more than the main features can be given

There was great ado about the bell to be made for St. Mary's. For a long while it was uncertain who would cast it, and at last, when an ironmaster was found with sufficient reputation for skill in bell casting, so great were the expectations of the people that he en-tered upon the work with fear and

The ironmaster was ready for the last act in a work that had for years taken up his attention. A long time be had been engaged on his calculations; carefully he had prepared his mold; in-tently he had dwelt on the combination of metals, especially as to the quantity of silver on which he relied to soften the harsher sounds produced by the others, giving sweetness and harmony. The component parts were all in the huge crucible, under which the fires had been burning sufficiently mass. The long continued effort was ready for consummation.

But the result—would the bell be wonder of melody or give out a harsh clang? It might be anything between these extremes. If thought, calculation, care, could make it perfect, it would be perfect. But in the calcula tions might there not be some error? And the casting-if the mold should be defective, if the melted metal should Corvailis, $4.05.

During the whole of his long labors a young apprentice had assisted him. Placing implicit confidence in the young man's discretion, the master left the crucible, the fire under it, the mold ready to receive the casting, in his care.

When he had gone the apprentice stood looking up at the huge crucible that contained what was to be the bell of the Church of St. Mary's. He had watched every effort of his master, as sisting at many of them, and with the enthusiasm of youth believed it would be one of the famous bells of the world. At the base of the crucible was the stopcock which held the metal in its place and when opened would let it run into the mold. That was all there was to be done-open the stop-cock, and gravity would make the bell.

Just as the apprentice's eye rested on the stopcock a thought lit, like a bird on a branch, on his brain. Why not himself open the stopcock? He would suffer the wrath of his master, but his name would go down through the centuries as the caster of the world renowned bell. Whenever it sent its musical vibrations far and beef, bulls, 31@4c; cows,51551c; steers, wide those who heard it would think large and coarse, 4@6c; spring lambs, formed the consummating act in its construction

The impulse was irresistible. Going to the stopcock, he pulled it open, and out ran the molten mass. At the same moment a diabolic "Ha, ba!" rang its musical tones the plety and reverence of countless human beings, had chosen to bring about a tragedy which should forever be connected with its history. While the metal was running per 100; huckleberries, 6@7c saw what had been done, turning ; peaches, 60c@$1.00 box; pears, $1.00 white as the snow, he demanded to know who had opened the cock. The had done it himself. The master, draw-

Time passed. The ironmaster was in prison condemned to die for the murder of his apprentice, and the bell was hung high in the Church of St. Mary's. There one evening at the hour of the angelus it sent out a melody of such strength and sweetness that all who heard it dropped on their knees. Not only had its maker's care and calculations produced a marvel, but the promature opening of the stopcock had not been any detriment. But the man who had produced this result was not permitted to hear the melody. Within prison walls, through which the sounds could not penetrate, BALANCE LIST-CALL AND LOOK he lauguished, wondering if his efforts had been effective, if they had not been rendered abortive by the apprentice. Then when his jailers were about to take him to the scaffold he the bell. His request was granted, and his journey was lightened by its exquisite tones. The last sound he seard before the executioner's ax fell was vibrations sent from the work of his brain. And he knew that if Satan had made him a murderer and connect ed a tragedy with the result of his la bors he had produced that which would move mortals to devotion for centuries

I walk an' walk, but set ees queer
I meet so few da poopla here;
Ees only wan or two, but steell
I look for more. I climb da heell
An' travel down da hotta road.
Da street plan' ees heavy load;
I am baygeen for feel da heat,
An' so, bimeby, I stop an' seet
Een shady place bayside da way.
Oh. I am mad! I growl an' gay:
"I mak' not moocha mon' today.
W'at for you com', oh, foola man,
Where no wan hear your street plan'?"

But den, w'at s'pose ees happen me? Firs' theeng you know, ees leetla tree Mak' funny noisa where eet stan's, So like as eef eet clap eets han's! Don gentla feenger een da air
Dey com' an' pull me by da hair;
Ees som'theeng een dees sweets brocze
Dat speak to me an' coax an' tease.
An' den da iky, so wide, so blue. Ect seem to smile an' coax me too. So all theorem speak, as oof dey say: "Com', let us have da music. Play!"

I play wan tune-yes, two, t'ree, four, Like w'at I novva do bayfore! I stop. Da sky cry, "More!" An' den I play dem evra wan agen. So, too, I leeft my voice an' seeng. Da breeze say "More!" to everytheeng Bo all day long ees lika dat. Oh, 'Mericana man, I gat Som' curses an' som' food to eat Wen I am play een ceety street, But here da sky, da bresze, da tree, Dey speak Eetalian to me!

Dr. Carroll had yellow fever, which raged in his system for the allotted period. The martyrdom of Lazear occurred on September 25, 1900, after an illness of nduced by the bite of a stray insect in the hospital ward where he was enhad previously allowed himself to be failed to develop the disease in conrather than a part of the program that his life was given as it was.

The nobility of the sacrifice made by these physicians is strongly set forth by Dr. Donally in his discussion. One of the finest tributes ever paid their work was that of Dr. Henry D. Holton, in his address as president of the American Public Health Association, in 1902, when he said.

"The patriotism of the military as they sprang to the defense of their country, always deserves and receives the applause of the populace. Their deadly conflict on the battlefield is made easy by martial music, the booming of artillery, the rattle of the infantry fire, and the advancing step of comrades. How much more should we recognize the course of such devotees of science a Dr. James Carroll and Jesse W. Lazear. who, filled with a great philanthropic love for humanity, calmly, quietly, without the cheers or even the knowledge of the multitude, silently submitted themselves to the test to determine in what way this pestilence was communicated. We are told, Greater love bath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend. We find that Jesse W. Lezear, fired and impelled by his great love for his fellow man, did offer his body as a sacrifice upon the alter of scientific investigation, to the end that in the years to come hundreds of thousands might escape this pestilential death."

Dr. Carroll's untimely death, at th age of 53, concluded a very honorable career, beginning with elementary education at a school in Woolwich, England he was an Englishman by birthwhich was followed by training in the University of Maryland, and in the post graduate pathological department of John Hopkins University. After his fateful experiment at Havana he was made first lieutenant and assistant surgeon in the United States Army, and professor of bacteriology and clinical microscopy in the army medical school, besides holding a professorship in the department of medicine of the George Washington University, where he was universally beloved. The general public, which necessarily has not been particularly interested in such technical mating School, 1426 Fourth avenue, Seat- occocidium Stegomylae" had nothing to do directly with the yellow fever, was at the same time aroused by his decease to a somewhat better understanding of the greatest cure known to modern science. the man's simple-minded heroism.
