AN OLD TIME GAMBLING EPISODE.

(Original.) When I was a little chap living in Cincinnati I was delicate. We had relatives in New Orleans, and at one time I was sent down there for my health. The only route was by the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, and I made the trip in one of the big steamers of that day. The main feature that I remember was seeing men sitting in the cabin playing cards, with beautifully colored chips. Why they used the chips I was too young to understand. In this connection I also recall their leaving the tables occasionally to go to a little box about the size of a "Funch and Judy" show, placed forward in the cabin, where they drank drinks of (to me) beautiful color.

The Mississippi was one vast gambling resort from Cairo to New Orleans. There were fatboats fitted up for the purpose that floated slowly down the river, tying up at any point where there were people to be fleeced, and wherever there were planters there were victims. One afternoon one of these fatboats descending with the current was seen from the shore not far below Memphis to be turning in to shore. The only power aboard was in the arms of men and a couple of long sweeps or oars on either side. Those on the starboard side flashed in the sunlight, while the tiller or left a riple stern. The boat in this way was brought ashore, and a hawser was got out and tied to a stump upon the river bank.

That night Julian Maran, a young planter, stepped aboard the boat and, with one or two of his friends who were already there, opened the game. Maran had sold his plantation and negroes and was going to Baton Rouge to marry his sweetheart and take up his residence there. The money he had received was in bank except a hundred dollars, with which he proposed to amuse himself on the fatboat. He added considerably to his hundred dollars during the evening and, being a chivalrous fellow, considered himself bound to go back the next day and give the bank a chance for "revenge." In a few days the fortune he had in bank was every cent transferred to the safe in the fatboat.

That was a curious age. If there are chivalrous professional gamblers now, we hear nothing of them. There were chivalrous gamblers then, and they made their influence felt. Perhaps it was because gambling had not then been left so far behind other means of making a living as it is now. The gambling propensity has developed into more legitimate forms. Be this as it may, as Maran was parting with the remnant of his fortune, Gustavus Sterling, a professional gambler, who had once been a respectable planter, boarded the fatboat. He had left "the profession" and with his winnings had bought Maran's plantation. When Maran had parted with his last dollar, Sterling walked up on to the river bank with him.

"Permit me to say, sub," he said to Maran, "that I have seen many fools in my life, and you are one of the biggest. Even when a gambler plays fall the advantage is with him. The men on this boat are of the lowest kind of swindlers." Maran, maddened, was about to retort angrily, when Sterling pulled a roll of bills from his pocket and continued: "You go down that tonight with this and start in again. Don't play to win. Play only to be in the game. I'll be there, and take a hand myself. Have a gun in your pocket, sub."

Maran tried to express his gratitude, but Sterling turned away and went to seek a few of the former's friends. That evening Maran, Sterling and two others whom Sterling had asked to be present opened the game on the fatboat. The owner of the outfit and two assistants were of the party, making seven in all. They had played an hour or more when a jackpot was opened, and the pile on the table grew enormously. Suddenly Sterling clapped one hand down on the money and whipped out a gun with the other. At the same moment Maran and his two friends drew their weapons and covered the three professionals. The coup was effected so quickly that not one of the latter was able to draw.

"Put your arms on the table," ordered Sterling, raking off the money into his hat. Then, setting the hat on a chair, he went to the owner of the boat and began to search him. "H-m" he remarked, drawing several aces held by a clamp attached to a rubber cord in his sleeve. "A cheap device, but good enough to fool asses with." Then, going to the next man, he took a pack of cards from his pocket, held them up to the light and continued: "Marks big enough to see in the dark. All the court cards are plain on the back as on the face."

After going through the three men and finding evidence of fraud on all, he politely asked the owner for the key of the safe. The man, having a pistol muzzle within a few inches of his ear, complied. Sterling opened the safe and counted out an amount equal to Maran's losses and handed it to him. Then he paid what losses the others had made from the money in the hat. He was himself a winner, and this amount he took from his pocket and tossed it on the table.

When the party left the boat they cut the cable, and it floated down with the current. Its profits and losses at its last landing place had been nil. Maran left the next day for Baton Rouge and was married soon after his arrival. Had it not been for Sterling's interference he might have become a professional gambler himself. GEO. D. MILLS.

LOCOMOTIVE TRIALS.

Actual Value of Different Types To Be Determined By Test.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 20.—Beginning next week and continuing for at least two weeks, the Pennsylvania Railroad will conduct the most exhaustive test of locomotives ever made by a railroad company.

The object is to learn the actual worth of each of the five types of locomotives now in use on the system. The test will be made on the Great Line Division of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago and will be in charge of D. F. Crawford, general superintendent of Motive Power of the Pennsylvania West, assisted by a corps of scientific experts.

The experts will select a piece of road which has all the different types of construction, grades, curves and conditions. The different machines will be weighed. The fuel, water, oil, steaming power and other technical details will be as carefully noted and in each case the locomotives will be given the tests of speed, drawing power, relative cost, relative wear and tear on each, the effect on the road bed and rail, even on the ties and spikes. All strains and weights will be recorded and from the mass of data thus secured, it is expected that deductions will be made that will have a far reaching effect on the future orders of motive power for the entire Pennsylvania system.

At this time the first real test of the Pacific machine, the first of which was put in service several months ago, will be made. This is known as the largest passenger locomotive in the world. It weighs over 204,000 pounds. The official test was delayed until this time in order that the machine might be limbered up and at its best.

Dancing Proves Fatal.

Many men and women catch colds at dances which terminate in pneumonia and consumption. After exposure, if Foley's Honey and Tar is taken it will break up a cold and no serious results need be feared. Refuse any but the genuine in a yellow package. T. F. Laurin, Owl Drug Store.

Is Bryan's Popularity on the Wane?

Lieutenant Governor Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler's friends are greatly cheered by two recent happenings.

The first is the excellent effect produced among Southern leaders of his party by the New Yorker's speech at Atlanta. Southern newspapers have been most encouraging in their comments on the statesmanlike quality of Mr. Chanler's first public declaration on national matters; and Chairman Conners, as well as other New York Democrats, have received many letters from prominent southerners who refer to the Lieutenant Governor as the Mosca destined to lead the Democracy out of the Egypt of defeat.

The second justification for joy among the Chanlerites is the slap that the Bryan cause received by Kentucky going Republican after the Peerless One had canvassed that State. They argue that it is the best possible indication that the great personal popularity of the Nebraskan is on the wane, and that it proves that, after all, there is not such a crying demand for Mr. Bryan as might be supposed. Well-informed politicians say there is no doubt that Chanler will go into the convention carrying the instructions of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and some of the New England states, and that the south will go to him with a rush after the first few ballots.

The New Pure Food and Drug Law.

We are pleased to announce that Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds and lung troubles is not affected by the National Pure Food and Drug law as it contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, and we recommend it as a safe remedy for the children and adults. T. F. Laurin, Owl Drug Store.

MEETING OF CIVIC FORUM.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The opening meeting of the civic forum will be held in Carnegie Hall this evening. The general subject will be "Public office."
