AMERICAN ORGANS

Uncle Sam's Organ Builders Surpassing European Brethren.

WORLD'S BIGGEST INSTRUMENT

Public Interest Centered in Large Organ Being Built in Brooklyn Concert Hall—Will Have Five Manuals and 140 Speaking Stops.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Are Uncle Sam's builders of church and concert organs destined to surpass those of Europe in the skill with which they put up the largest, most perfect and most admirable of musical instruments? A well-known musical authority, William C. Carl, says that America is far in the lead of all other countries in the number of organ concerts and appreciation of organ music; and the latest governmental bulletin on the manufacture of musical instruments and attachments shows that between 1900 and 1905 the value of the pipe organs made in this country increased from $1,188,006 to $2,088,193. This is a greater growth than that which took place in the manufacture of pianos or of any other large class of musical instruments.

Already some very famous organs have been made in this country since 1745 when Edward Bromfield, Jr., of Boston set up the first collection of 1200 pipes. Just now there is public interest in the biggest instrument in the world which is in course of erection for a concert hall in Brooklyn. This will have five manuals, 140 speaking stops and the various mechanical accessories which render the work of the modern organist less laborious than formerly. It will be entirely of American manufacture, as is another very famous concert organ, that in Jordan Hall, Boston, which was installed a short time ago as a gift from Eben D. Jordan, Esq., to the New England Conservatory of Music. This latter instrument, built along the lines of a famous organ at Sienna, Italy, and provided with every possible facility for musical expression, stands at the modern end of the long line of pipe organs that have been constructed in the state of Massachusetts since Bromfield's imitation of an English pipe organ first scandalized the more rigid Puritans. It was built in the intelligent technical way in which the census bulletin just out states that "almost every pipe organ charge it is has, altogether fourteen pipe tution of musical education in whose it is designed to be placed." The installations of the room or auditorium in which with the architecture or acoustic quality is practically built to order to accord organs in daily use by pupils and teachers. This is more than double the number of organs contained under any other single roof in the world.

The "Great Eastern" among American concert organs was one made in Germany just before American manufacturers had sufficiently acquired the confidence of musicians to secure important contracts. This was the large instrument which Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote an enthusiastic and often quoted description. It was in many ways a fine piece of apparatus, though it had mechanical defects. Its use continued down to 1884, when it was sold to a wealthy citizen of Boston who presented it to the oldest and largest of American music schools. It was too big for the building then occupied by the conservatory and was held for a few years, to be subsequently sold for the metal and wood it contained.

This was the first important concert organ in the United States. Since 1863 they have been installed in music halls of a number of the larger cities. Some of the organs which are now being made here are destined for private residences, for it is becoming quite the fashion among the American millionaires to install these big "boxes of whistles" in their residences. Andrew Carnegie, for example, is aroused from his slumbers every morning by organ music, and Charles M. Schwab has a $25,000 instrument in his New York house.

The wonderful quality of American made organs is testified to by the veteran composer and organist, Dudley Buck who wrote recently in The Musician:

"When I toured in America years ago as a virtuoso organist, I always objected having other players near the keyboard, as I had devised certain special means of securing striking combinations of tone-color, little tricks of the trade, which were regarded as wonders by merely pressing a button. The difference in the action and the electric and mechanical devices now in use is indescribable. Foreign organists, who are unfamiliar with these devices, can only teach the American organist a great many things which he will have to unlearn or mentally readjust after his return to America."

Mothers with little children need no longer fear croup, colds or whooping cough. Bees Laxative Cough Syrup tastes good. It works off the cold through the bowels, clears the head. Guaranteed. Sold by Frank Hart's Drug Store.

MORE WATERED STOCK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Wm. M. Ivins, while investigating the affairs of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company for the Public Service Commission yesterday declared that Mayor Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, and his friends, who formerly owned the Nassau Electric Railway Company, of Brooklyn, had watered its stocks to the extent of $6,250,000 and then sold it to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. This was alleged to have taken place in a reorganization of the Nassau Company in January, 1900.

A Significant Prayer.

"May the Lord help you make Bucklen's Arnica Salve known to all," writes J. G. Jenkins, of Chapel Hill, N. C. It quickly took the pain out of a felon for me and cured it in a wonderfully short time." Best on earth for sores, burns and wounds. 25 cents at Chas. Rogers & Son's Drug Store.

TO STEADY MARKET.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—President Wm. M. Wood, of the American Woolen Company stated yesterday in relation to the curtailment of business that the American Woolen Company was not operating about 75 per cent of its machinery and will continue to curtail production in consequence of the prevailing business situation, although amply provided with orders for future deliveries. This policy averts the accumulation of goods and preserves the future of the woolen goods market.
