HIS PROOF OF COURAGE.

[Original.] "No, Phil," said Stella Hopkins to Philip Woodsum; "you are too prosaic. Now, if you would only knock some one down—some one who had insulted me!"

"But no one has insulted you." "Some one might, then what would I do for a protector?" Phil left her much depressed, and when a man is depressed about his love affairs it either takes away his appetite or makes him hungry. It made Phil hungry. He started for a restaurant, picking up his friend Sidney Searle by the way, to whom he told his troubles. Searle told him that the proper thing for him to do, under the circumstances was to find some means of showing his prowess. The friends went into a cafe and ordered a brace of chops and a toby of ale for each. At a table near by were several young men in evening dress regaling themselves with oysters and champagne.

"Phil," said Sidney, "that fellow with a molasses candy mustache is staring at you."

"What do you think I'd better do?" "Go up to him and tell him that you'll give him a chance to stare at you over the muzzle of a pistol."

Phil reluctantly dragged himself from his chair and went through the required performance. Cards were exchanged, the offender's pasteboard bearing the name of Harold Littlefield. He explained that he thought Phil was an acquaintance of his, but the explanation was not accepted, and Sidney took it upon himself to arrange for a meeting. The principals were to fight at 6 o'clock the next morning at a lonely spot a few miles out of town on the bank of the river.

Phil went home and to bed, first setting his alarm clock. He went to sleep at 3 o'clock, and the alarm went off at 4. It is hard to conceive of anything more uncomfortable than being awakened before daylight by a rasping sound to the consciousness of having to go out in the raw air to be shot at. Phil got up languidly, dressed himself slowly and started for the dueling ground. The nearer he approached the weaker grew his resolution. The result was that 6 o'clock found him half a mile from the appointed spot, sitting on a log, looking very disconsolate.

Then he was seized with a curiosity to go and, unobserved, take a look at the place and see how his friend and his enemy took his absence. So he got up and trudged on, stopping at a place where he could overlook the field from behind a tree. He saw the two seconds walking back and forth to keep off the morning chill, but there was not a principal in sight. It occurred to Phil that Harold Littlefield was as averse to being shot as himself. Here was the chance of a lifetime. Phil determined to hurry down to the seconds, trumping up by the way an excuse for being late, and bluster about the absence of the man who had agreed to fight him.

Mr. Littlefield had suffered the same disinclination as Phil to having the warm blood let out of his body on a cold morning. He had halted in a wood on the side of the field opposite to where Phil was in hiding and, seeing that his enemy had not appeared, resolved to go down and claim a victory by default. By a curious coincidence in time the two men started forward at the same moment. Unfortunately they caught sight of each other when it was too late to retreat. Both stopped and stared. Both half turned as if to flee, then simultaneously dragged themselves forward.

The seconds looked at them sternly and asked the cause of their delay. Both gave very lame excuses, but so long as they were there to shoot each other the rest was unimportant. The seconds proceeded to get all in readiness, pacing off the ground and looking to the condition of the weapons.

"What's the distance?" faltered Phil in a whisper to Sidney.

"Twenty paces," replied his second.

"Can't you make it forty?" "I'll see."

Sidney marched up to the opposing second and asked the wishes of his principal as the challenged party concerning the distance.

"My principal says sixty paces," replied the second.

Sidney went back to Phil and reported the result.

"Try for eighty," said Phil.

"Eighty! Nonsense!"

Phil insisted, and Sidney went back and succeeded in arranging for eighty paces on the ground that his man was farsighted. The men were placed in position, and Sidney was about to give the signal for firing when a clatter of horse's hoofs was heard on the road behind the rise from which Phil had started to claim a bloodless victory. The next minute a girl on horseback shot over the rise and, seeing the men in position to shoot at each other, gave a shriek. Riding between them, she drew rein. She was Stella Hopkins.

It was impossible that the duel should proceed. Phil threw down his pistol as though greatly aggravated, the opposing parties looked relieved, while Sidney Searle turned his back and smiled. No one ever knew how Miss Hopkins became aware of the intended meeting except herself and Mr. Searle, and he would not tell because it was by his connivance. After the principals had left the field he discharged one of the pistols at a tree eighty paces distant and found the ball on the ground at the foot of the tree. Mrs. Woodsum has always declared that she rejoiced at having proved her husband's courage before marriage though she risked two fives. CHAUNCEY WARDWELL.

POLICEMEN KEPT BUSY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—During 1907 the police of the First Division of the City of New York, comprising the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, arrested more people than live in cities of the class of Denver. The total number of arrests in the district was 149,494, an increase of 8202 over 1906. Of the total number arrested 126,627 were males and 21,867 females.

Taking the district's population as 2,541,034, the number of arrested represents 5.9 per cent of the whole. The total number arraigned for felonies during the year was 13,913, an increase of 2360 over 1906 and of 5880 over 1897. The figures are made public in the annual report of the board of the city magistrates.

Fever Sores.

Fever sores and old chronic sores should not be healed entirely, but should be kept in healthy condition. This can be done by applying Chamberlain's Salve. This salve has no superior for this purpose. It is also most excellent for chapped hands, sore nipples, burns and diseases of the skin. For sale by Frank Hart and leading druggists.

Mr. Littleton is sensible in that he springs no "dementia Americana" on us; he calls it just plain crazy.

Stomach Trouble Cured.

If you have any trouble with your stomach you should take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Mr. J. P. Klote, of Edina, Mo., says: "I have used a great many different medicines for stomach trouble, but find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets more beneficial than any other remedy I ever used." For sale by Frank Hart and leading druggists.

In the ranks of the processions of "unemployed" are many individuals who are professionally in that class.

Lame Shoulder Cured.

Lame shoulder is usually caused by rheumatism of the muscles and quickly yields to a few applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Mrs. F. H. McElwee, of Boistown, New Brunswick, writes: "Having been troubled for some time with a pain in my left shoulder, I decided to give Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial, with the result that I got prompt relief." For sale by Frank Hart and leading druggists.

There is further evidence that he is sour in the freedom with which Judge Parker hands out lemons these days.

Don't Take the Risk.

When you have a bad cough or cold do not let it drag along until it becomes chronic bronchitis or develops into an attack of pneumonia, but give it the attention it deserves and get rid of it. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and you are sure of prompt relief. From a small beginning the sale and use of this preparation has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. Its many remarkable cures of coughs and colds have won for it this wide reputation and extensive use. Sold by Frank Hart and leading druggists.

The statement is made that a dollar goes a long way these days. It does; it goes so far that it is usually out of reach.

The Pure Food Law.

Secretary Wilson says, "One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines." The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is made on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest, but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use. For sale by Frank Hart and leading druggists.
