A MEMORABLE TRAGEDY.

ti Grew Out of the Last Great Slave Auction In This Country.

The last great slave auction held in this country occurred just a year and A half before the war-in October, 1859 -at the race track in Savannah. The slaves were the property of Pierce Butler, a picturesque and prominent figure at that day in Philadelphia so clety, who is today only remembered as having been the husband of Fanny Kemble, the actress, reader and au thor. His family name was Mease, but be inherited a fortune in lands and slaves from his grandfather, Major Pierce Butler of South Carolina, on condition that he should take the latter's name.

Butler's inveterate passion for gam bling got him into financial difficulties, It is said that he lost $26,000 on a singie hand-four deuces against four rings held by his opponent.

Finally, to meet his losses, Butler was forced to sell his slaves. There were 988 of them in all. The sale took two days and netted $303,850. Butler had chosen a good time to sell. A year later his negroes would not have been worth a dollar a head. But the sale would have been more profitable had it not been announced as one of the conditions that no division of families secure a good slave buyers often had to take with them infirm or aged rela tives. Out of this limitation grew a memorable tragedy. Tom Pate, a wel known Vicksburg trader, bought at the sale a man, his two sisters and his wife, with the guarantee that they should not be separated. Disregarding this, Pate sold the sisters, one to Par Somers, a brother trader, and the other to a resident of St. Louis. What legal rights a negro had in the south were well protected. Somers was told of the guarantee, and he sent the girl back to Pate and demanded his money A quarrel was the result, and Somer was shot dead. Ten days later his nephew killed Pate and died from wounds received. The feud was kept up until every male bearing the name of Pate was wiped out, and then the war liberated the sisters.—New York Merald.

Impassable.

I can get by a bootball tackle,
I can get by a scouting line
Or a crowd of cronies awaiting
To stick me sure fog the wine,
But the woman who waddler widely
And takes up the whole sidewalk
(And half of 'em do, by jingo!)
Doth all of my efforts balk.

I go to the side to pass her,
And there she is blocking the way.
I make a dart to the center,
And there is the devil to pay.
To the opposite side I hasten,
And the obstants old I meet,

Till at last I am slad to dive in The danger and dust of the street. -New Orleans Times-Democrat.
