"THE PEOPLES' LOBBY."

raging from one-third to one-half of the usual rates. For want of capital to invest in theatrical entertainment of some instructive value, thousands of people to whom such shows as "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" and the "Queen of the Highbinders," and the "Queen of the Highbinders," do not appeal have missed the pleasure and instruction to be obtained from the drama. One of the surprising things that the Institute's cheap rates have shown is a passion on the East Side for Shakespeare. The proof of this is that 3500 tickets were sold in one week for the Shakespearean productions of Robert Mantell. Some of the results of last year's dramatic campaign included the witnessing of "The Man of the Hour," by 15,000 persons and of "Peter Pan" by 10,000. In two weeks 3,000 tickets for George Bernard Shaw's satirical "Caesar and Cleopatra" were sold to people most of whom had never before seen the inside of a Broadway playhouse. The drama made out of Lew Wallace's "Prince of India" drew an audience from the ranks of the Institute's clientele numbering 5,000, while 600 witnessed Browning's "Pippa Passes." Approximately 80,000 persons altogether were benefited by this plan, and more than $25,000 accrued to the theatrical managers from increased sales of seats. This year not only the drama but musical productions are made available to those of limited means, and the extent of the work seems likely to be trebled. Indeed, it is possible that by the end of the season the record will approach a quarter of a million.

On the side of the theatrical managers, the Institute's plan of education by theatre-going is welcomed, so much so that the incidental expenses are borne by them. As a matter of fact, it has accomplished the wonder of wonders in New York—made the presentation of Shakespeare and dramas of simple life less hazardous financial propositions. Thus the work has a desirable effect on the tone of the stage in addition to its educational and pleasurable value to the masses. To make sure that the productions are of a proper character they are all passed upon by the Institute's dramatic committee composed of several Representative educators others before arrangements are made to bring them within reach of the Institute's clientele.

The most widely known side of the Institute's activities has to do with the promotion of the public welfare. The general work of education has been made to count heavily in this direction. An organization has been perfected which enables thousands of persons not only to express themselves through representative gatherings, say upon a question of legislation affecting the city or state, but by reason of thorough training to make the expression conservative and therefore of weight. There is a central committee on legislation which keeps in constant touch with the work of the lawmakers at Albany. Among others of this committee are Prof. George Kirchway, Dean of Columbia Law School, Julius Henry Cohen, Chairman of the Citizen's Union Committee on Legislation, and J. Aspinwall Hodge. William M. Ivins, chief inquisitor for Governor Hughes's Public Service Commission, likewise frequently takes a hand in the big mass meetings which the Institute calls in Cooper Union when it is desired publicly to approve or disapprove proposed legislation. For the matter of that, Governor Hughes himself is no stranger either upon the Institute's platform or to the influence for good which its work exerts. In a number of cases this influence is definitely accredited with having sounded the death knell of "grab" legislation and similarly with having caused the passage, through aroused public opinion, of beneficial measures opposed by special interests. In none of its activities does the Institute have political affiliations.

On Sunday nights at Cooper Union is shown what may be accomplished in solving one of the city's most seriously regarded problems—the disaffection of the working classes from the church. The Institute's religious endeavors are styled a "People's Church" and such in the broadest sense the gatherings seem to be. Each Sunday evening from 1500 to 2000 men and women crowd into the auditorium (which will seat but sixteen hundred) and a majority are men. The discussions are ethical; the "People's Church" has no creed other than an acknowledged allegiance to "a power higher than ourselves" and the principle of the brotherhood of man and its platform is open to all denominations. Jew and Christian alike preach to gatherings composed of those of all faiths or no faith. So far from arousing antagonism from the established churches, this work has been heartily approved by a majority of the prominent ministers of the city and by all of the hundred of more who from time to time have spoken from the platform. A novel feature of these gatherings is the privilege the audience has at the end of every address of asking questions of the speaker or of expressing individual opinions. The result is that the tenor of the meetings is toward practical pointing along the road to better things which can be followed by believer and non-believer alike.

The Institute's building on Stuyvesant Square serves as the centre to which are allied the smaller clubs and where all activities are related and centralized through committees. One of the most important of these is the federate civic council which is made up of representatives of the Institute's various clubs and subdivisions and practically all the active civic organizations in the city as well. In effect it is an organized public conscience, since through it the machinery of public opinion may be started when it is necessary to take concerted public action.
