

PIRATICAL PROGRAM

Portland Will Dictate the Senatorship.

UNHOLY TWENTY-THREE

Jack Matthews in Charge of Operations and Busy With Preliminary Work.

STATEMENT NO. 1 IS DOOMED

Chamberlain and Fulton Marked for Sacrifice, and T. B. Wilcox, the Champion Round Whom All Will Rally.

A certain citizen of this city went to the metropolis the other day for the express purpose of ascertaining, as nearly as might be, the Republican political status of things there and the consensus of Portland opinion on what the programs were to be for the summer, fall and winter campaigns; and a reporter of the Morning Astoria having knowledge of his intent, lost no time in hunting him up on his return, for an interview, since there is as deep an interest in this subject, broadcast here, as this intelligent seeker, himself, feels in the premise. The gentleman was in no wise reticent and unboomed himself to the following effect:

"To my surprise I found, upon casual inquiry, that there were exactly 23 candidates for the United Senate in, and of, the city of Portland; and this impressed me with the conviction that Portland was committed to the policy of holding the representation from this State in the upper house exclusively within her own bounds, an impression that was crystallized into righteous conviction before I left there.

"As the Portland proposition is now framed up, the 'unholy 23', as they are dubbed up there, are pledged to two undeviating lines of procedure, namely, the election of one of their group to the Senate at Washington, and the obliteration of Statement No. 1, from the legal and political organism of the State.

"Jack Matthews has been haled back from the fastnesses of his long retirement, reinforced with a brand new suit of togs and a clean shave, and is in charge of the propaganda; and as a consequence of the new assignment, he has chucked all his old alliances and is as busy as 10 men around the Imperial Hotel lobby, button-holing every man that looks as if he needed enlightenment or any other old thing that may qualify him as an adherent to the new and entirely metropolitan schedule.

"The fact that Mr. Matthews is taking pains to declare that T. B. Wilcox will not be a candidate for this lofty office upon any predicate analogous to Statement No. 1, leaves, of course, the incontestable inference, that that gentleman will be a candidate before the legislature next winter, and this is admitted everywhere there. Mr. Cake is the only man in Portland, with aspirations of this sort who even pretends to confess the functional uses of Statement No. 1, and he is in the field on that basis, and of course due to be slaughtered when the combination gets after him. The Wilcox boom was born simultaneously with the Taft banquet last fall, and which served as its cradle, with the irrepressible Tom Richard-

Upon the conclusion of his remarks he was accorded an ovation by the Democrats and Republicans alike.

Clark arraigned the Republicans for their attitude on the tariff question and said the announcement that there would be a tariff revision after the election was simply "in preparation of another stupor—a bluff upon the people." He discussed the President's message and said whatever his virtues or his faults, the President was not a Democrat.

DETROIT, Feb. 13.—Secretary Taft was the guest of the Michigan Retail Lumber Dealers' Association this afternoon and talked for half an hour at a luncheon tendered him upon the "Moral awakening recently from business methods which permit illegality and fraud."

Secretary Taft is accompanied by Ambassador Jusserand, Governor Guild of Massachusetts and United States Senator Alden Smith.

Former Senator Palmer presided as toastmaster. Ambassador Jusserand was given a hearty thundering welcome when he was presented by the toastmaster. The ambassador said because of his position, he naturally could not mingle in American politics but he eulogized the American presidents of the past and said it was his hope that the country would add another glorious name to the already glorious list.

"I do not know who it be," said the Ambassador, "But it seems that you know." (Applause for several moments).

Taft spoke of the revelations of the insurance investigation and the evils of the over issue of stocks and bonds which he said was obtaining money under false pretenses. The secretary advised greater power be granted the interstate commerce commission.

He also declared that he believed government ownership of railroads would create a tremendous concentration of power and would endanger the safety of the republic. He recommended that the anti-trust law be made more specific. Regarding the panic through which have just passed, Taft said some who had felt the lash of public opinion attribute this to legislation. He stated that the charge is untrue.

He admitted that European investors had been frightened at the revelations of dishonesty in many of our large institutions, but declared that the man charged with this lack of confidence is not the man who pointed it out but the one who engaged in it illegality.

GARFIELD'S ADDRESS

First Big Gun Fired for Republican Campaign.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGES

He Denounced in Stinging Sentences Men of Wealth Who Break the Laws and Seek to Turn Political Power to Their Own Use.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—One of the first big guns of the Republican national campaign was fired at the Lincoln day banquet of the Hamilton Club last night by James R. Garfield, secretary of the interior.

The efforts of the administration to correct the abuse of special privileges and the intentions of President Roosevelt in taking each of his steps against corporate wealth formed the subject of Mr. Garfield's address.

The question of special privileges, Mr. Garfield maintained, was uppermost of the problems of the day. The Republican party he said, stood face to face with the proposition of carrying on the policies of the President in bringing men of wealth who broke the laws to their account or turning back the pages of history.

The currency question, tariff, labor troubles and various other subjects were touched upon by Mr. Garfield but all as illustrative of his great point. The administration, he said, stood for the gaining of equal opportunity to all men and such as enforcement of the laws as to bring this about.

Mr. Garfield denounced in stinging sentences men of wealth who break the laws and seek to turn political power to their own use. He was careful to draw the line, however, between the destructive and constructive kind of criticism. The policy of the administration toward corporation evil doers, he said, had averted
