GOVERNMENT BUYS COAL

The coal purchases of the United States Government aggregate in value nearly $6,300,000 annually, and it became apparent some time ago that a more uniform basis for buying coal was urgently needed.

Until after the establishment of the fuel-testing plant of the United States Geological Survey at St. Louis, in 1904, reliable information in regard to the character of the coals of the United States was difficult to obtain. Coal has been purchased by the Government, as well as by the general public, on the mere statement of the selling agent as to its quality or on the reputation of the mine or district from which it was obtained; and if it did not prove to be satisfactory there was no standard for settlement or justification for canceling the contract.

The United States Geological Survey has been charged with the duty of analyzing and testing the coals used by the Government, and a summary of the information on this subject obtained to date, including samples of the specifications for coal contracts that are now in use and analyses of some of the coals purchased during the winter of 1906-7, prepared by Mr. D. T. Randall, has just been published as Bulletin No. 339.

The work was taken up by the technologic branch of the Survey as the result of a letter written by President Roosevelt to the National Advisory Board on Fuels and Structural Materials, a body of leading engineers of the country appointed by the President some time ago to deal with just such questions. The Advisory Board referred the President's request to Government engineers familiar with power-plant requirements, who drew up specifications for the purchase of coal on its actual heating value, which were afterward revised and recommended by the Board.

REASON ENTHRONED.

Because meats are so tasty they are consumed in great excess. This leads to stomach troubles, biliousness and constipation. Revise your diet, let reason and not a pampered appetite control, then take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be well again.
