DR. KINNEY'S DEATH.

The elimination of such a life and example as Dr. August C. Kinney's from the midst of a community like this, leaves a void that is not filled with the mere gathering of the masses over the paths he trod; he was greater, more valuable than that, and it may be years before the real entity will be supplied. As in the ancient days, he stood among the wise men; not aloof, but on the level of things as they were; with ready interest and kindness and the unflinching faculty of doing and saying, always, what was best and right and most expedient. In the public sense, he was one to whom all men turned for advice, opinion and approval; and what he gave in this line was final with the recipient because it was untingered of self, without bias and free from all untoward dictates.

His private life was model in the highest conception. A cultured gentleman, his home, his pursuits, his habits, all bore the stamp of refinement and made the niceties of life indispensable at all times; as a devoted student in the walks of his profession, with a fixed ambition to conquer the unconquerable and make for the physical peace of humanity, he wrought nobly and insistently through the years of his manhood against the dread "white plague," and did what he might to master it utterly; with what success we shall all come to know when his scientific memoranda is given to the world by those who have it in charge. And the cardinal honor that is his, is that he did this great task while contending with what proved to be an incurable and greivous malady, that impeded his every step and fought day and night against the superb courage that animated him; a phase of martyrdom that but accentuates the splendid history he has made. Astoria is proud, with an honest pride that will outlive the day of her grief; and the name and fame of August C. Kinney are tableted indelibly in the hearts of his fellows here!

FEAST OF THE ROSES.

It has been definitely settled that Astoria is to figure handsomely in the great Feast of the Roses at Portland in June next; and the detail of preparation has been taken over by men well equipped for the duty and upon plans that make manifest this city's interest in the event. Her float will be among the real beauties, the real significant things, of that day; and we are looking for Portland to do just exactly the right thing in this relation, forgetting what of unpleasantness has prevailed in the past, and making for the new friendliness and helpfulness that mutuality and kindred interests stand for.

Astoria will send her car and her crowds and her goodwill to the metropolis, and do it with a spirit that is Oregon-wide and Portland-centered; and all in the hope that her "olive-branch" will not be ignored nor broken nor misunderstood. The rose festival is typical of peace and prosperity, and we are going to use it for all it is worth along those lines.

FACING A CRISIS.

Stanford University is facing the crisis of its career. It is about to close its doors against 260 of its students for deliberate transgression of its laws; and this is the thing to do. The original twelve of this host cannot be made scapegoats for an affair in which the whole group participated; an affair that was an outrage on public decency and collegiate honor and dignity.

This is the moment in which to make a lasting impression on all student bodies of the country for their good and to demonstrate that university life has some other and better aims and impulses than mere whimsical, or worse, indulgences. We hope the faculty will stand pat for sake of all concerned, an interest that reaches even further than the student body, by a very wide margin.

IS GAINING GROUND.

The contention of the gill-netters at the mouth of the Columbia as embodied in their bill now before the people is gaining ground daily, and the people at large are becoming not only aware of the tremendous variance in the measures in conflict, but that the gill-netters' claim represents thousands of workers and millions of dollars of investment, as against the paltry and selfish demands of a beggarly handful of plutocratic operators in the upper reaches of the river who desire to maintain a piracy that is shameful as it is devastating to a really great industry. The earnest men in charge of the honest, and only acceptable methods, of fishing, are sanguine of victory and are leaving no stone unturned to warp it where it will be a victory indeed.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE

Serious Results Often Follow Applications of Mixture.

"STANDARDIZING" THE SPRAY

Sufficient Work Has Not Been Done to Justify the Statement That Lime-Sulphur Is Equal to Bordeaux as a Preventative.

The serious results in the form of "Bordeaux Injury" which often follow applications of Bordeaux mixture render it almost imperative that some means be found of reducing this injury, or that some spray be discovered which may be used as a substitute for Bordeaux.

For the past two or three years I have observed, after winter spraying apple and pear trees with lime-sulphur solutions, for San Jose scale, that the fruit upon the sprayed trees was less "scabby" than that upon unsprayed trees. Upon two different occasions this winter application was delayed until the blossoms were about to open and while the spray which was applied at the full strength did considerable injury at the time, its decidedly beneficial effects were noticeable when the first fruit was gathered. However the generally good results which follow winter applications of lime-sulphur are now well known and this part of the work requires no further comment.

Nevertheless, these observations suggested to me the probability that lime-sulphur solution might be used as a substitute for Bordeaux mixture for summer applications and during the past year I have so used it upon various plants and for various purposes.

It is not proposed at this time to go at all into detail regarding these experiments—I wish only to call attention to some of the results obtained which show conclusively that lime-sulphur solution may be used as a summer spray without injury to foliage and also point strongly to the probability that by its apple scab may be effectually controlled without danger of spray injury to the fruit.

Sufficient work has been done to justify the statement that lime-sulphur is equal to Bordeaux as a preventive of this disease but the results of the single season's work point so strongly to this conclusion that I feel justified in calling attention to them, that growers who have suffered loss from Bordeaux injury, and other who are interested, may make comparative tests of the two sprays the coming season.

In carrying out the work the past season it became necessary first of all to determine how strong a solution could be used without injury to the foliage. This, again, made it necessary to adopt some method of "standardizing" the spray. After considerable work we adopted what may be termed the "stock solution" method of preparing the spray and adopted as a standard for the work a "stock solution" having a specific gravity of 1.27. (For determining the specific gravity of the solution while at work in the field we have found the specific gravity hydrometer a very convenient instrument. It is cheap, simple and convenient and I would recommend every grower who expects to use lime-sulphur as a summer spray to obtain one.)

This solution, similar to the Rex sprays upon the market, any of which would undoubtedly do as well, is of a clear dark amber color, is without sediment, and as stated above had a specific gravity of 1.27. Analysis showed that each gallon contained in solution 2.38 pounds of sulphur.

During the season of 1907 these "stock solutions" of lime-sulphur were used variously diluted upon the apple, pear, peach, plum, prune, quince, cherry grape, potatoes and celery.

The results obtained indicated that lime-sulphur sprays produced by diluting 1 gallon of the stock solution with 15 gallons of water may be safely used upon all of the above-named
