LOUNGERS IN LUXURY

The Life of the Gilded Youths of Great Britain.

FADS OF MODERN SYBARITES.

They Surround Themselves With the Highest Products of Civilization and Make Idols of Their Bodies, These Twentieth Century Epicures.

In a case that came before the bankruptcy court recently the debtor, a young man in the early twenties, gave in his accounts an item of $5,000 which, he said, was the amount he had lost owing to the compulsory sale of the furniture in his flat. The original cost of the furniture in question is left to the imagination. The truth is that our "golden lads" do themselves remarkably well (to use their own expression) and think that nothing in the world is too good for them. We are always reading in the papers allusions to the luxury and extravagance of women of the smart world. Now and then we may come across some reference to the elaboration of self indulgence in which the young men of our wealthy class luxuriate. Some years since we had a description of the wardrobe of a New York "dude." It appeared in an American paper, and much of it had been communicated by the young man himself, especially some information as to the prices of the garments he affected. Not long after a paragraph went the round of the papers about a certain Italian poet and the little comforts with which he loved to surround himself. They were described as in no way inferior to those of the New York young man. It is not alone in England that the dandy surrounds himself with the highest products of civilization and makes a god of his body.

The luxury of a woman of fashion pales almost to insignificance when compared with that, for instance, of her brother in the guards or heir to the family estates. The young man who was $5,000 to the bad in consequence of "the bankruptcy sale" of his furniture is a case in point. He probably lavished between $8,000 and $10,000 on the plushing of the rooms. This is not much beyond the usual with young men of the kind. Carpets alone make a large hole in $1,000. Something very special in wall hangings is proportionate in cost. Each piece of furniture is a gem in its way. The tradesmen know the kind of customer they have to deal with and that for the present—there is plenty of money. They bring forth their richest and rarest and not in vain. The high ambition of the young man is to "go one better" than any other fellow he knows in every detail of his surroundings. The civilized world is ransacked in order to provide him with the latest refinements of costly luxury in such appointments as bed and bath, glass, china, ornaments, silver and dexterously shaded lights. His florist's yearly bill would keep two or three poor families.

As to dress, a single fact may throw some light on the relative values of the young man's wardrobe and that of the smart woman. The valet of one such gilded youth having complained to his master that in his large and luxurious west end flat there was no proper accommodation for his clothes, the resource of renting a second flat equally large for the housing of the wardrobe was suggested and at once adopted. A small room is devoted to clothes and brushes and certain preparations for the treatment of shoe and kid and boot leather. A larger room is given to the boots and shoes themselves and their familiar trees, and so on with the more important articles of dress. Country clothes have spacious quarters devoted to them. They include riding gear, cricket and tennis suits, sporting get-up and traveling kit. Here are his portmanteaus and traveling bags, an imposing array. A large wicker basket standing among them elicits smiling inquiry from the interested relatives whom he has invited to tea and to whom he is showing his new "digging." "Oh, that?" he says. "That basket ought to know its way to France alone. It goes every fortnight with my washing. English laundries ruin silk things. We tried 'em. Tore them to pieces and made the sheets yellow in no time."

"Silk sheets?"
"Oh, yes! No one ever has any other now."

"And you send this huge basketful once a fortnight?"
"Every week," he corrects us. "One is on its way back now."

It is interesting to see the young men of the day at our smart restaurants, each seated alone at one of the tables, intent on doing himself thoroughly well. His whole mind seems occupied with the menu and its component parts.

nothing, and his expenditure upon the luxuries of existence far exceeds that of the most extravagant of the women of the fashionable world.—London Queen.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS

Miss Emma Wittie of Mannheim, Pa., dreamed that her brother had expired and learned later that he had died on the street at Reading.

Mrs. Betty Vevey of Worcester, Mass., who says she is ninety-six years old, peddles bluing, walking from three to five miles daily. She was born a slave.

Mrs. Russell Sage has purchased a new residence at 604 Fifth avenue, New York city, for $400,000. The present Sage residence will be converted to business uses.

Mrs. Robert Van Wyck, wife of an ex-mayor of New York, is initiating Paris society into the teachings of Vedantic philosophy so familiar to New Yorkers, but unknown to the Parisian smart set.

The prettiest woman in America, according to Bourne-Jones, is Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks, the wife of the vice president's eldest son. As the Bourne-Jones type of woman is very much the rage now, Mrs. Fairbanks has reason to be much flattered with the noted painter's approval.

For a long time it has been expected that Mrs. J. L. Gardner of Boston would provide by legacy that the famous Gardner collection shall go to the Museum of Fine Arts, but instead it is understood she will provide for the perpetual maintenance of the Fenway museum as a separate institution.

DEATH WAS ON HIS HEELS.

Jesse P. Morris, of Skippers, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak and with such a fearful cough that my friends declared consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a half bottles I was a well man again. I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung disease in all the world." Sold under guarantee at Charles Rogers & Son drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Most victims of appendicitis are those who are habitually constipated. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup cures chronic constipation by stimulating the liver and bowels and restores the natural action of the bowels. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Refuse substitutes. T. F. Laurin Owl Drug Store.

AN INSIDIOUS DANGER.

One of the worst features of kidney trouble is that it is an insidious disease and before the victim realizes his danger he may have a fatal malady. Take Foley's Kidney Cure at the first sign of trouble as it corrects irregularities and prevents Bright's disease and diabetes. T. F. Laurin Owl Drug Store.
