Says That De Young Doesn't Control Editorial Policies of Chronicle.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—M. H. De Young of San Francisco did not appear in Judge Cabiness' court today when the case against him for criminal libel brought by Detective Burns was called. He was represented by attorneys. John P. Young who testified that he is the editor of the Chronicle and responsible for its utterances. He testified that De Young doesn't control the editorial policy of the Chronicle and is not consulted with regard to the particular article objected to in the complaint and that he was out of the city on the date of its publication, and didn't know of it until it appeared in print. Secretary Chesley of the Chronicle Publishing Company was asked to produce the corporation's books in order to determine who owns the majority of the stock. De Young's attorneys objected to the displaying of the contents of books. The court adjourned until Monday when the attorneys will argue admission of the books.

STANLEY KETCHELL WINS.

Given Decision Over Billy Papke After Furious Contest.

MILWAUKEE, June 4.—Stanley Ketchell of Grand Rapids was given the decision over Billy Papke of Ke-wanna, Ill., at the end of a fast and furious ten-round bout tonight. The contest was a terrific affair from the tap of the gong to the finish with the exception of the time during which the men were engaged in clinches.

Time and time again Ketchell forced his man to the ropes and his furious onslaughts, and without giving him a moment's rest. Ketchell appealed to the referee to break the clinches repeatedly. Only in the eighth round did Ketchell have an even break. At the end of the last round Papke was plainly in distress and would probably not have lasted another round. The biggest crowd in the history of boxing in Milwaukee witnessed the contest. Among the notables were Jimmy Coffroth, Abe Attell, Joe Gans, Pack McFarland and Frank Gotch.

"All that will be done," said Mr. Payne yesterday, "is that the executive departments, notably the Treasury Department, will be asked to collect certain data in regard to the tariff schedules and have the information ready in time for the next regular session of Congress." The Administration programme now, it is asserted, is for the nomination and election of Taft, after which a special session of the 61st Congress will be called to take up the subject of tariff revision. In the event that a Democrat is elected next Fall, President Roosevelt will call Congress together for tariff revision next November.

McNichol, the acknowledged head of the republican organization had been summoned on a warrant sworn out by Max Kauffman, the private secretary to Mayor Reyburn to whom McNichol stated on Tuesday that he gave $10,000 for the use of the law and order society, in discrediting the reform efforts of Mayor Weaver in 1905.

The case of the prosecution was rested after two witnesses, neither of whom gave important testimony. The defense, in rapid succession, introduced several witnesses who testified to the bad reputation of Evans. The defense then offered witnesses to testify to the good reputation of Dr. Owens but the prosecution conceded all this testimony.

INFERNAL MACHINE.

At Theatre Door, May Have Been Intended to Blow up Audience.

GLENDALE, Or., June 4.—The most fiendish attempt at wholesale murder in the history of the state was discovered yesterday in this city. Who the guilty person could have been it is hard to say now, but had the investigation been conducted sooner some clue might have been discovered.

H. G. Sonnemann, owner of the Auditorium, while working around the building, saw a gunnysack containing what he supposed was an oil can, near the walk leading to the entrance, and remembered that the morning after the home-talent play, "The Blue and the Gray," given here on March 7, that he had picked up the same package in the vestibule of the auditorium and placed it out near the walk, thinking it was an oil can forgotten by some of the audience the night before. It remained there and when he saw it again yesterday he would see what it was. On opening the sack he found a tin can, one of the cases that matches come in, with a screw top which had rusted so tight that a can opener had to be used to get it open. On opening it he found it a veritable infernal machine, for it contained 20 sticks of dynamite with a long fuse nicely placed and cap in position. The fuse had burned to within six inches of the cap and then the closely sealed can had caused it to die out of its own accord.

The night of this play practically every man, woman and child in the city was packed in the building, and large numbers of people from Wolf Creek, Fernvale, Grants Pass and other neighboring cities were also present. It was one of the largest crowds ever congregated under one roof in the city. The attempt at wholesale slaughter could not have been timed, for had the explosion occurred it would have killed every person present. The can was at the front entrance to the building and placed in such a way that that entire end of the building would have certainly been blown down, letting the walls and roof collapse on the people in the audience.

PORTLAND ROSE PARADE

morning. To increase the importance of this incident to the parade, the local Japanese asked that they be allowed to defray the entire expenses for these floats. The escort for the "Cherry Blossom" procession waved wands of cherry tree branches, also in full bloom, and millions of the delicately tinted pink petals were strewn on the crowd.

The cadets of the Oregon Agricultural College, at Corvallis, carried the monster crowd off its feet by their perfection of drills and bewildering movements. They were like a unit and were given ovations as long as in sight. Queen Mora's float which immediately followed the squad of mounted police in the lead, was the signal for the first outburst of enthusiasm. The Queen of flowers vaulting over her, surrounding which was a golden crown. In her hand Queen Flora carried her scepter, by wave of which she acknowledged the plaudits of the thousands of faithful subjects gathered to do her homage. The body of the float was filled with great masses of roses which has been furnished by the Rose Society, and these the maids-of-honor and flower girl attendants showered over the just and unjust alike.

The officers of the Rose Festival came next in a rose decorated carriage, preceded by an escort of the Portland Hunt Club; following them came Grand Marshal F. O. Downing and his staff, with De Caprio's band.

The Portland Hunt Club in the next division made the finest showing in its history, both as to the number of entries, their fine mounts, the neat and artistic scheme of decoration, to say nothing of their new boots and saddles and costumes. The full membership of more than 200 were in line and rode four abreast. The boys and girls of the Junior Hunt Club were also out en masse, and brought up the rear of the saddle horse section with a score or more of decorated ponies as the rear guard. The dancing Shetland pony simply threw the multitude into spasms of delight, for the little animal kept perfect time to the bands, and when the bands were not playing the cunning little beast changed his step, once a cakewalk, now a waltz and again a two-step.

The big prize of the day was awarded to the ring numbered B-60 in the horse and buggy class, and consisted of a $200 trap donated by Studebaker. The second prize in this class was awarded to rig No. B-6. Other prize-winners were:

DREYFUS' LIFE ATTEMPTED

the Pantheon, where his wound was dressed. The doctors found that the bullet had entered his wrist.

In the meantime a cordon had been formed around the assailant, who, under the direction of M. Lepine, was conducted to a side entrance of the Pantheon.

All this time the vast multitude packing the sidewalk and crowding the windows on the streets converging on the Pantheon had no suspicion of the excitement that raged within the temple. The appearance of President Fallieres at the portico had been greeted with a great cheer, which drowned the cries of "Down with Dreyfus" and "Long live the army," which came from a band of about 500 men belonging to an association known as La Jeunesse Catholique who had stationed themselves on a corner opposite. Soon after this cheering, regiment after regiment came swinging by to the blare of trumpets and the sound of martial music.

After having his wound dressed, Major Dreyfus was taken to his home, where he was joined by his wife, who was with him when he was shot.

News spread like wildfire through Paris and caused a veritable panic, as it was also believed that President Fallieres had been killed. The crowds around the Pantheon were driven back and all the streets leading to the temple were barred. Twenty arrests have been made.

Emile Zola, who died in September, 1902, was ten years ago condemned to a year's imprisonment for addressing to Felix Faur, then President of France, the famous letter, "J'Accuse," in which he laid bare the conspiracy in the General Army Staff against Major Dreyfus. Today his dust was interred with National honors in the Pantheon, the French Temple of Fame, with impressive ceremonies. The opposition to removing the remains of Zola to the Pantheon arises from the fact that he is thus honored because of his famous letter, not because of his literary fame.

He was the first successful leader in the Dreyfus war; he vanquished the General Staff of the Army, and to give him glorious burial in the National Pantheon at the side of Berthelot and President Carnot, Victor Hugo, Voltaire and Rousseau, to an accompaniment of martial music, while long lines of soldiers filed before his tomb, aroused the passions of a large number of French people.

The attempt upon the life of Major Dreyfus was made by Louis Anthelme Gregori, a member of the staff of La France Militaire, a journal devoted to military progress and the military future of the republic. Major Dreyfus was present at the ceremonies to do final homage to the great leader of his cause.
