ABANDON EFFORT ON DERELICT

THE STEAM SCHOONER MINNIE E. KELTON HAS NOW SUNK PRACTICALLY OUT OF SIGHT.

The work of endeavoring to raise the steam schooner Minnie E. Kelton was abandoned last evening, and it looks now as if she will never be brought to the surface. During the day yesterday a force of men worked over her, but nothing could be done, though much had been hoped from the use of a mushroom anchor. Upon the return of the men last evening it was stated that the Kelton was then practically sunk out of sight under the water. The sands are piling up around her in bad shape, and the derelict will prove a menace to shipping unless removed. Until word is received from the owners in San Francisco no more work will be done on her. She has been stripped as far as possible.

The steamer Spencer will make daily runs between Portland and Astoria for the remainder of the week, leaving Portland at 8 o'clock each morning and Astoria at 2:30 in the afternoon. The high water in the upper river is the cause of bringing her down on a daily run.

The steamer Eureka will leave for Eureka and Coos Bay at 6 o'clock this morning. The Roanoke is scheduled to go down on her southerly trip Friday morning, arriving here at 4 o'clock in the morning.

The British steamer Medura arrived yesterday from San Francisco.

SMALL POX SCARE ABOUT OVER

MANY RELEASED FROM SHERMAN LAST EVENING AND THE SITUATION IS WELL IN HAND.

The Electro arrived at her moorings on this side of the river shortly before 6 o'clock last evening with 55 persons on board from the quarantined transport Sherman, which lies at the station on the north side of the river. Among the party of 55 were discharged soldiers, army officers and quite a few civilian men and women who had made the voyage across the Pacific on the transport from the Philippines. The whole party were as happy as a lot of boys just out of school, and they deemed it the greatest of good luck that they had been able to secure their release from the quarantined vessel.

Their release had been secured in accordance with the policy laid down by Dr. Holt, the quarantine officer. It had been decided to permit those who had previously had the smallpox, and those who recently had been successfully vaccinated, to go ashore and set out for their destinations. It is fairly evident that there is not the slightest danger of these persons spreading the disease, as every precaution has been taken to safeguard the welfare of the public, and Astoria need feel no alarm, at having half a hundred persons landed on her streets who have been exposed to the disease, according to those in charge of the matter.

Among those released was Judge Kincaid, of Texas, who is en route to the Democratic National Convention at Denver as a delegate.

Dr. Holt stated to a representative of the Astorian last evening that the situation on the transport is well in hand and no further spread of the disease is expected. The sick soldier is said to have merely a mild attack of the disease, and no new cases are reported.

A slight clash of authority occurred in the matter of quarantining the Sherman. Monday night a message was received through the military department of the Columbia from the Secretary of War, directing that the transport proceed directly to San Francisco. The order was imperative. Yet despite this order Dr. Holt, acting within his authority and under the authority of the medical department, retained the vessel here and will keep her here until the smallpox scare is disposed of.

It is apparent that Dr. Holt believes that the wisdom of retaining the transport here is already justified by the results, as already the situation is well in hand, while if the vessel had proceeded to San Francisco there would have been a serious delay during which alarming conditions might have arisen.

From many quarters there is apparent a feeling that Dr. Holt has acted not only with commendable promptness, but in a manner that is deserving of high praise. The responsibility of the affair was no light one, and red tape and delays of any kind would only have aggravated the whole matter to an intense degree. Now, however, the whole affair is rapidly dwindling into a mere episode.

Eight more of the immunes are expected to be brought over from the Sherman this morning. Among those who came over last evening were George Bennett, collector of customs at a port in the Philippines; R. D. Blanchard, of Manila; W. O. Watts, of Japan; Mrs. George H. Hurd, of Manila, en route to Boston; J. W. Miller and wife of Kearney, Neb.; Mrs. Gertrude Gould O'Connor, of Oakland.

The personal effects of the 55 who arrived over last night were examined by C. H. Haddix, the customs inspector, and Mr. Haddix found it a very pleasant crowd of people that he had to deal with.

The soldiers who came over report conditions in Manila and throughout the islands to be in excellent shape. It was really interesting to see the men as they stepped out on the Astoria dock—their first step on American home soil. Some of the men seemed to think that the present case of smallpox is a very mild one, but all reports agree that the sailor who died at sea had the disease in malignant form.
