DOCKS AT KALAMA.

The word has gone out from Kalama, that the Northern Pacific Company intends to build a system of docks at that point and amplify its yardage and remodel its depot and grounds generally to meet an access of business at that point in the shipping line.

The fact that the company is laying a double track road from that city to Vancouver direct and that it will be finished co-incidentally with the new docks and warehouses alluded to, is significant of the policy of the Hill people not to be tied up to Portland for their export and coast shipping facilities; that it will have a straight and independent line of operation to use for direct, augmentive or substitute carriage of grain or other outward cargoes.

It also means that the company, in thus fortifying itself against such limitations and coming half way down the river to accomplish it is nursing a program that must eventuate in the gradual establishment of its ocean despatch from some point closer to the Capes, and that finally the business will be done from the mouth of the river, probably at Frankfort, the western terminus of the right-of-way holdings of the N. P. on the Columbia: All of which is sure to react in favor of Astoria and the whole sea-end of the valley. The policy is strictly logical and emphasizes the appreciable fact that James J. Hill and his colleagues, are at least clear of the Portland dominance, a commercial cult that bars any and everything that does not pay direct tribute to the Oregon metropolis.

CHATAUQUA NEXT

Among the large and interesting possibilities in line for Astoria, is the full establishment on the Clatsop coast of a splendid Chatauqua auditorium and athletic field, along with all the addenda that goes with this admirable socio-religious fraternity. The investment is to be of such scope as to warrant the liveliest anticipation on the part of all Clatsopians, in both the practical and the ethical avenues of expression and advantage, and should inspire the widest and heartiest encouragement that can be given to it here.

There can be no doubt of the entire good will of city and county in this valuable premise, and every thing will be done to contribute to the opening of the enterprise at an early date in the season of 1909. To fail, to neglect or disparage in the slightest, so great and good a thing as this will mark us eternally as a community unfit and undeserving.

A LA ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Bryan, a la Theodore Roosevelt, is out with an announcement, that if he shall be elected to the Presidency in November, he will never seek re-election to the great office again. This is exactly what might have been expected from the Democratic candidate; it is his first act in assimilating the methods and policies of the present executive, and before he is done with his course in the campaign it will be observed and noted, that he is hewing religiously to the Roosevelt line; it will pay him immensely to do it. He can have no better nor safer criterion, and he knows it.

The man who cannot match Roosevelt as man and president, will appeal in vain to the American people. Therefore, we are not surprised to see the great Nebraskan emulating him thus early in the game. It is fully expected of Mr. Taft, for to him the mantle of his friend, mentor, and chief has been, tentatively, cast, and will be taken up and proudly borne by the man who has helped amazingly in the formulation and application of those policies to which the whole country, irrespective of politics, has subscribed.

Mr. Bryan can do no better than cling closely to the doctrines of the Rooseveltian era, if he really hopes to inaugurate a "Bryanic" period, and we cannot forgo the fear that even with the most ardent alignment of this sort, he is destined to meet a period of another kind; the kind that will forever fix the said "Bryanic" period at a date co-incidental with the day of election in November next.

SHERMAN AND KERN.

The vice-presidential nominees, Messrs Sherman and Kern, are good fellows, but—

They have permitted the use of their names on the two great tickets of the land, for campaign purposes only, and will have to accept the consequences, chief among which will be a negation measurable only by the momentous importance of their respective colleagues, in the turmoil that is ahead of us all.

Very recent history has given the American people a lesson worth the heeding in this matter of vice-presidents: The succession of Mr. McKinley, falling as it did to a man of invincible courage and wonderful training, furnishes forth a hint of what the vice-presidency may mean at any time in our history. We know nothing of the gentlemen immediately in question as fit successors of either of the leaders, and we can but hope they are of the calibre that will meet and serve any such tremendous emergency.

The mere sufferance to which the vice presidency has dropped in these days, has made it a fearsome thing to most good and able men, who see in it the travesty of office-holding in the concrete, and nothing else, and refuse to allow themselves to go up for sacrifice. It is time the close associate of the Chief Executive of the Nation, the second man in the land, was made something of besides a political sop, and a poor figurehead, a hollow sham, and a subject for ribald cartoon and jest; the office should be invested with dignities that line-up sharply with the prestige of the greater post and save our good and reputable men from the reproach inseparable from its present emptiness and barren import, even if the national constitution has to be amended in the doing of it.

TIME TO CHLOROFORM.

LONDON, July 11.—Dr. William Osler who, while a professor of medicine at John's Hopkins University had fame thrust upon him by his reported declaration that sixty years was the limit of man's usefulness, will himself enter upon his sixtieth year tomorrow. It is evident, however, that the eminent physician and instructor has no immediate intention of resorting to the chloroform bottle, for he has consented to run in opposition to Winston Churchill and George Wyndham, ex-Secretary for Ireland, for the Lord Rectorship of the University of Edinburgh next November.

THEY ESCAPE DEATH

Two Haytien Merchants Were Condemned

FLEE FOR THEIR LIVES

"Take Them From Their Beds and Shoot Them," a Message Read, But Friends Intervened and Aided Them to Get on Board a Vessel.

NEW YORK July 11—By the suppression of a telegram ordering their arrest and immediate death as enemies of the government of Hayti, and with only one hour to spare, two merchants of Port Au Prince saved their lives by flight and are now in New York on their way to Curocco. They are Adolf Valbrune and Dantes Theodore, both of whom arrived here on the Prinz-Wilhelm IV of the Royal Dutch West Indies Mail Service.

Through the influence of friends they learned only July 4, that an order for their arrest and been issued. The telegram received at Port Au Prince was said to have borne the name of Nord Alexis, President of Hayti, and to have read in part: "Take the men from their beds and shoot them at once."

Valbrune and Theodore stood high in Haytien circles and had many friends in the service of the government. Realizing that immediate action was imperative they conferred with officials who were friendly and arranged to have the telegram held in the receiving office at Port Au Prince until two o'clock in the afternoon of July 4. The Prinz Wilhelm IV was scheduled to steam for New York at one o'clock.

The two condemned men gathered together a few pieces of baggage and went aboard the vessel. When the telegram was delivered the Prinz Wilhelm IV had steamed an hour before and the refugees were beyond the jurisdiction of Haytien law.

Boy's Life Saved.

My little boy, four years old, had a severe attack of dysentery. We had two physicians; both of them gave him up. We then gave him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which cured him and believe that saved his life.—Wm. H. Strolling, Carbon Hill, Ala. There is no doubt but this remedy saves the lives of many children each year. Give it with castor oil according to the plain printed directions and a cure is certain. For sale by Frank Hart and leading druggists.

NOW COMES HEARST

Independence Party Says it Will Put A Full Ticket In The Field.

NEW YORK July 11.—Preparations are well under way for the national convention of the Independence party which will be held at Chicago Monday July 27.

The Independence party leaders say they will put a full ticket in the field and will also try to have a state ticket in every state in the Union. In 38 states national committeemen of the party, the last state thus represented being North Dakota.

Although the party leaders have not come out strong as yet for any one man as their standard bearer in the campaign, there is a strong sentiment, they say, for Thomas L. Hisgen of West Springfield, Mass. Mr. Hisgen ran for governor of Massachusetts two years ago on the Hearst ticket and polled a surprisingly large vote.

This was encouraging to the Independence party leaders. Another possible candidate is M. W. Howard of Alabama, a member of the national committee of the Independence party from Alabama. He is a former congressman.

Over Thirty-Five Years.

In 1872 there was a great deal of diarrhoea, dysentery and cholera infantum. It was at this time that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was first brought into use. It proved more successful than any other remedy or treatment, and has for thirty-five years maintained that record. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to every part of the United States and to many foreign countries. Nine
