TAFT AND BRYAN

Bryan paid a deep tribute to his character and as Bryan arose he was cheered and the echo continued for many minutes. He delivered a nonpartisan address. He spoke of the changing times in politics and of the evolution which would bring the opposing candidates for the presidency to the same banquet table and said; "I am glad to meet at this board one who has been honored by his party with the leadership in a great camappreciation of his abilities and his virtues. If I am successful, the victory will be the greater to have won defeated by such." Mr. Bryan then delivered an eloquent and thoughtful address on commerce, the man made corporation and the law of God in commerce and society.

Taft was introduced by reference to his mission to the Philippines. Taft, whose rising was greeted with another outburst of cheering perfected his proferred speech with a few impromptu remarks, which created laughter. Taft said, "I have only begun to run for the presidency and I am glad to begin when the political amenities of the campaign are better understood. I am exceedingly by all signatory powers. glad to meet my distinguished opponent and fellow guest and to forge the rivalries and disputes of the campaign in this inspiring hospitality. And I reciprocate in every way and to the full his kindly and courteous words of respect and good will. With partisan speech is pretty much of a (Laughter)."

PRINTERS' BLUNDERS.

Jomic Effects Frequent in the Days When Bad Copy Was the Rule.

Typographical errors that produced weird or comical effects are described by the St. Louis Republic in an article recalling the days when all of that newspaper's type was set by hand, before the introduction of typesetting unchines, when the copy, instead of being typewritten, was turned over to good, bad and indifferent chirography.

Comparatively few of the errors were allowed to contribute to the gayety of the subscribers, as the majority were squelched in the "house of correction," as the proofroom was facetionsly termed. From a collection made by a proofreader the following instances of ridiculous misreading of copy are taken:

"His blushing bride" was trans formed into "his blustering bride." A captain was said to have "served with destruction in the Confederate army," but the writer thought he wrote "distinction." Two pictures entitled "The Galley Slave" and "Each in Their Turn" were referred to as "The Galley Love" and "Enoch In Shin Town."

Having in mind the influence of former citizens of the land of the shamrock upon the political destinies of the town, what more natural than that the printer man should set up an "Irish district court" where it had been the "first district court?"

Professor Frank Gecks was menlections" rather than "violin selections."

Somebody was quoted as saying that all the singing folks on the vaudeville stage have hundreds of wives," but the copy, when carefully examined, was found to read "husbands or wives," and a sensation in the theatrical world was averted.

"They sailed for three days around the cape and finally slaughtered a small Italian" was corrected to read "sighted a small island."

On one occasion the reporter wrote of certain "dwarfed and hungered children," who were made to appear perhaps more pathetic when the compositor substituted the words "doorfed and haggard."

"He takes delight in talking on his family shame" was a shameful thing to say about him, for "favorite theme" was meant.

"Red Cross Society Will Fight Corbett" was the way the typesetter transformed the copy concerning a crusade against cholera.
