"THE HONEYMOONERS."

Among the 20 big musical numbers contained in Geo. M. Cohan's "The Honeymooners," which will be seen at the Astoria Theatre next Sunday are such emphatic Broadway hits as "Kid Days," "Let's Take An Old Fashioned Walk," "Make a Lot of Noise," "In a One Night Stand," "I'll Be There in the Public Square," and "If I'm Goin' to Die I'm Goin' to Have Some Fun." Despite the great number of musical numbers Cohan has found room for a rousing plot that is logical and coherent throughout and holds the interest. He also indulges in delicious satire at the expense of Tigrardville, Vermont, where the story takes place, and he introduced a long gallery of brilliant character types ranging from a stranded actress. "The Honeymooners" was played all last summer at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, and was hailed by Broadway as the greatest of all the Cohan song shows. The public support given the production made new records for box office receipts. "The Honeymooners" will be seen here precisely as at the New Amsterdam Theatre whence it will return in the spring after the present road tour.

A SURPRISING WEDDING.

It Gave a Shock to the Lady Who Was So Anxious to See It.
An elderly American authoress asked me to conduct her to a place where she could see a workman's wedding, as she required it for a new novel, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Gentlewoman. To oblige the lady I took her to the Lac Saint-Fargen, an establishment at the top of the steep Rue de Belleville.
It was still early when we reached the place, and no brides or bridegrooms were visible as yet. At last two charabancs drove up to the door, and a noisy company alighted, all smoking cigarettes, including the bride, which shocked my friend exceedingly.
The company then sat down to luncheon, and we watched them from a distance, while a photographer took up his position near us. The meal did not last very long and ended in the bride performing a jig on the table, while the guests danced around her. They then started games, hide and seek, etc., and while the bridegroom had his back turned the bride threw her arm round the neck of a red haired youth.
This led to a fight between the two. The useless became general, the bride pulling off her wreath and throwing it at her father-in-law's head. My friend looked on in breathless excitement, while the guests jumped over the tables and chairs, but when the bride turned a somersault, alighting on the bridegroom's shoulders, the good lady's indignation rose to a high pitch, and it was only then that I told her what I—and the reader no doubt, too—guessed long before, that they were a party of acrobats rehearsing a scene for a cinematograph company.

No Police in Heaven.
Small Isabel's particular friend, the policeman on the beat, contracted pneumonia and died. Isabel was greatly grieved until her mother convinced her that he had gone to heaven. Even then she was not quite reconciled. "If heaven is such a good place," remarked the little skeptic, "I don't see what God wants policemen there for."—New York Press.
