SECOND GRAND PHILHARMONIC CONCERT

ASTORIA'S SPLENDID ORGANIZATION TO ADD TO ITS LAURELS TONIGHT

After months of exacting and devoted preparation on the part of the Astoria Philharmonic Society, under the direction of Dr. Emil Enna, of this city and Portland, the second grand concert to be given under the auspices of the Society, comes off tonight at the new and handsome hall of the Astoria Amateur Athletic Association...

The ladies and gentlemen of the Philharmonic Society, with Dr. Enna, are to be congratulated in advance upon the artistic faith and courage that has inspired this fine effort, and especially in the choice of the evening's theme, Dr. Enna's new opera "The Mountain King..."

At all events all Astoria is on the qui vive for the event and that the new hall will be crowded to the doors goes without saying. Following is an epitome of the song-story of "The Mountain King..."

"The Mountain King" is a mixture of Scandinavian folk-lore in the form of a modern opera. The mystic giant of the hills was supposed to rule arbitrarily and tyrannically, interfering in the affairs of men, of evil purpose and generally representing the villain in the mind of the superstitious...

Johanna, the heroine of the story is the daughter of the Mountain King. She is ignorant of her parentage, thinking herself the child of some simple peasants. She loves a young officer and intends to marry him. However, her powerful sire has other plans for her future, desiring her to succeed him on the subterranean throne.

Learning this from the fairy queen she accepts the mysterious wand by which she can undo the power of her father and thus become mistress of her own fate. Folk-songs, wedding bells, arias of giants and fairies are thus interwoven in the plot.
