

The Daily Market Report

PORTLAND, Dec. 10.—The week ends with the poultry market on the whole in better shape than for more than a month past. Hens and chickens were in good demand today, and at prices approximately 2 cents higher than the quotations at the first of the week, while ducks also were actively active at the quotations that have ruled all the week. For geese and turkeys there has been but little inquiry this week, but fortunately for the market, little stock in these lines came in.

There will be little if any poultry of any kind to carry over to next week, and the outlook is for a good market for the remainder of the month. No shipments of turkeys for the Christmas trade are expected for a week or more, but in all probability there will be enough for the demand for it is known that a number of the turkey producers of the Valley at Thanksgiving time held back some of their birds for the later holiday trade. Storage stocks in the city will also be drawn upon to some extent.
