The claim of the one-piece frock is, asserted on every hand, and the smart walking costume of the season will unquestionably be of these simple, jaunty patterns with coat of the same material or silk matching the material in color, rather than the customary coat and skirt suit with separate blouse. It must not be asumed, however, that the latter combination will be entirely out of fashion or unpopular during the coming spring and summer.

For many purposes such a tailored costume is the one altogether satisfactory thing, and this is especially true during the hot summer season, when coolness is essential and dust and perspiration are likely to play havoc with the frock every day. Lingeric blouses and their comfortable seperate waists of all kinds will be
