

The Daily Market Report

PORTLAND, March 29.—A peculiar situation has developed in the market. So far as the local supply and demand are concerned, there is nothing to indicate weakness in the trade, and the California market, which is usually one of the depressing factors in the Coast situation at this time of the year, according to latest reports is in no immediate danger of going to pieces; yet in the face of these conditions it is more or less generally believed here that there will be a further drop in butter prices about the first of the month.

As yet current home production is rather under than above requirements, due to the fact that increase in production in this state in the past 12 months has not kept pace with the growth of the demand. The flush season is now on in the dairying districts of the state, yet the demand is such that some of the city creameries today report an actual shortage while others say there is no surplus in any quarter.

In the South production is now heavy, yet it is reported that the surplus in California has to date been readily disposed of, and the situation here at this time is not considered really weak. Considerable California butter has been brought to Portland this month, but probably not more than is usually received from that quarter in March.

Fish Generally Plentiful.
Fish dealers report stocks, except in the case of salmon, as generally good and prices on all sorts about the same as last week. Halibut is coming in liberally from the North, and offerings of various sorts from the Sacramento River also are fairly large. Of the principal varieties of sea fish there is no scarcity for the time.

Two Straight Streets.
In viewing Manhattan from a point of vantage on the Metropolitan tower, nearly 700 feet from the sidewalk, one is chiefly impressed by the rigid lines which Park and Madison avenues cut through the length of the island. A tapeline drawn through a miniature model city could not be straighter. A twelve inch rule discharged at Twenty-third street would send its bullet straight into Harlem without touching a building on either side.—New York Post.

A Hard One.

He that waits to do a great deal at once will never do any.—Johnson.

"My three-year-old boy was badly constipated, had a high fever and was in an awful condition. I gave him two doses of Foley's Orino Laxative and the next morning the fever was gone and he was entirely well. Foley's Orino Laxative saved his life." A. Wolkush, Casimer, Wis. T. F. Laurin, Owl Drug Store.

QUENTIN METYS.
How Love Changed a Great Blacksmith into a Great Painter.

Love made Quentin Metys a painter. This great Fleming, whom both Antwerp and Louvain claim to have given birth, though the palm now rests with Louvain, was the son of an able blacksmith. Trained in his father's craft, the younger Quentin soon distinguished himself by his work in this base metal and among other matters turned out the wonderfully delicate ironwork that surmounts the well outside the Cathedral of Antwerp. Already an acknowledged master of his guild, it came about, writes Helen Zimmern in the Metropolitan Magazine, that the young artisan fell in love with the daughter of a rich Antwerp burgher. When asked to consent to a marriage, however, the father would not hear of it, saying he could not let his daughter wed a blacksmith. Quentin next inquired if he would feel the same objection to a painter? The good burgher, who anticipated no change of craft on the questioner's part, replied that there, indeed, was a more refined profession. What was his surprise and perhaps secret dismay when some months later Quentin Metys reappeared and asked for the fulfillment of the old burgher's promise. He had, indeed, become a painter and one already held in high esteem. To commemorate his love and his serving on her account Metys limned an "auto-portrait" that now hangs in the Uffizi, at Florence. Those acquainted with the secret know that if they touch a little spack in this frame the panel opens like a door, and behind the shelter of Metys' own portrait is concealed that of his love and wife, a sweet Dutch face for whom doubtless he deemed it well worth his while to have played the part of the patriarch Jacob.

A Putting Tip From St. Andrews.
A man on his first visit to St. Andrews was much impressed by the high standard of efficiency which he saw displayed on the greens by those with whom he played. He studied the actions of these heroes to see if he could discover any common feature in their methods. At last he saw light. He observed that they all hold the left hand more under the club when putting than they did when driving.

From this he deduced a rule of conduct—"see the finger nails of the left hand when addressed to the ball." For the rest of his stay, and it may be for some time afterward, his own putting improved considerably.—London Post.
