What the Neighbors Say.

"Corvallis takes the lead in esca pades. It is a rare week that goe by without a sensation of some kind."

The above is from the Albany Democrat and is the mildest of many similar notices we are getting just now in the valley newspapers and they cannot be answered, for i is based on information sent out from this town. Our two old newspapers here are run by men who face, while their dishonorable dealnever had any newspaper experiings with the public are being openence until they took charge of the ly discussed and reprobrated by all papers they now control. They took the Police Gazette for their leged beings to set up a defense, and standard of what a live newspaper resting in the assurance that they should be, so they hunt up and elaborate every little sin in the community in which they live and print it with scare heads and every other accessory within the law to make it look as bad as possible. This is what they call newspaper enterprise, and they have both tried to run over each other in their efforts to injure the character of and deplores. the community in which they live, The above is from the Daily Oreand to blacken the character of some unfortunate man or woman too weak to resent it. The truth is Corvallis is a moral little town; none more so in the valley. We have been a resident of the town and county for twenty years and know whereof we speak when we say, that there is not a town in Oregon of the same number of inhabitants where there is less crime, gambling or drunkenness than our own town. We have saloons here but they are kept by respectable men erable selfish existence, feeding at who value their character and obey the public crib. What, then, is the the law. Add to this that every good influence for the guidance of youth, and the reclaiming of those who have erred and fallen is in strong evidence on every hand. It will hardly be denied that every community has its weak and boisterous members and even its crimi-
