The Indian had boasted on two occasions by falling into a snare, and being well supplied with arms and ammunitions, to make a campaign against the enemy. In an attempt to draw the line, he was at the head of a large body, and Captain Allen received a sound from which he never fully recovered. Several others of the party were wounded, some of whom subsequently died of their injuries. After the Peace Agreement, this and no other stated causes of Yamhill county, shot through the heart and died in detail.

The Indians and whites were as close together that they could easily see. For the most of these knew General Lane, and when they found that he was on the ground, they rushed out to "see Lane," and urged him to supply them with some terms for conclusion of hostilities. The General, with some exception, was more or less disposed to the idea of giving him another chance. He called on the old men and promised them that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year.

For the remainder of the winter, the public was not well pleased with the General. He was a poor man, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year.

For the remainder of the winter, the public was not well pleased with the General. He was a poor man, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year.

For the remainder of the winter, the public was not well pleased with the General. He was a poor man, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year.

For the remainder of the winter, the public was not well pleased with the General. He was a poor man, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year.

For the remainder of the winter, the public was not well pleased with the General. He was a poor man, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year. The General was not the public's friend, and the Indians knew that he would come back next year.