Local Papers.

The following truthful remarks are from the Petaluma Argus: "Whether the people will or not, their local papers are their ambassadors abroad, and they are justified by their tone and healthy appearance. While it is the duty of the publisher to use all the diligence and energy to meet the requirements of the community in which he labors, there are reciprocal obligations on the part of every citizen in the community to contribute toward the material aid necessary to prosecute aright the work. There are various ways of doing this, principal among which is to subscribe and pay for local papers; if engaged in business, advertise in their columns; and if you have job work give your home office the preference. Publishing journals in close proximity to a large city is a laborious undertaking at best, but is doubly so when those to whom they can look for patronage yield them a secondary support. These reflections are applicable to interior journals generally.

One of the Census takers in this country, while taking the enumeration asked a parent where their children were born, and received the answer: "well, one was born in the parlor and the other one up stairs."

AN exchange says: "It very frequently happens that young pears and other fruit trees blossom, and if permitted to do so, bear fruit the same season that they are planted. We have had the blossoms and fruit of such trees pointed out to us as evidence that the trees were thriving particularly well. Such evidence, however, is indicative rather of weakness than of vigor. There is nothing more harmful to young trees than to permit them to bear fruit the year of transplantation. Even for dwarf pears the third year is soon enough for them to bear and the sixth year is soon enough for the generality of standards. Our readers will find that if they suffer young trees to mature fruit the first or second year, their vigor will in most cases, be impaired ever after, and having borne at this early age, they will not, as a rule, bear again in five or six years afterward. The temptation to inexperienced fruit growers to see their young trees in fruit as soon as may be, is considerable. It is because we yielded to such temptations that we are now able to guard our readers against falling into the same error. Fruit bearing is an exhaustive process, and only trees that have arrived at a certain age or maturity, can exercise the function without endangering their health and strength"

What was it? I went to the woods and got it. After I got it I looked for it. The more I looked for it the less I liked it. I brought it home in my hand, because I couldn't find it. It was a "silver."

Maud S. trotted a half-mile at Chicago on Monday in 1:05, the best of record, and finished in 2:13. She could have done still better, but her driver did not wish to distance her competitor.

St. Julien, Hickok's California trotter, with the miraculous record of 2:12, has delighted Chicagoans, easily winning three straight heats against Darby and Hopeful. Time, 2:17, 2:18, 2:16.
