In a place without means of communication other than a two-horse buckboard slow at that for bringing information from the outside world, we could not be expected to receive associated press dispatches, but it is our endeavor to secure every item of home news, and to keep our readers posted on every issue of importance, yet, as in the past, keeping aloof from political arguments of every nature, occupying a neutral ground, as it were, in the hody, politic, and giving the straightforward and unbiased truth in everything, making it the aim of the GRANT COUNTY News to work to the interest and prosperity of the people of Grant County, one and all, eschewing personal interests, and not favoring one particular section or locality above another. While thus doing, we shall not expect to please every one. to offend any one knowingly, without just cause, but if you are an evil-doer, please stand from under when the chips begin to fall. Volume ten is now before you, and if you like the paper, and belive it to be worth the price, those of you who are not subscribers, we would like to have your name. It not, don't take it.

Some years ago, when our friend Grativille Clark was mining over on Burnt River where rattlesnakes were more numerous than the frogs of ancient Egypt, he undertook to count a few as he walked to his cabin for dinner. Every step he would encounter a big six-foot serpent, and the number grew so appaling that he had serious doubts of his story being looked upon with any degree of credit, but Mr. Clark had kept the number correctly on a pice of paper, and knew whereof he spoke

The story coming to the ears of a lady of his acquaintance, living in the lower John Day valley, she smiled, and related the following, which occurred almost under her immediate notice: A family in Illinois possessed a very fine rattlesuake. They had captured it by means of a forked stick when it was a baby, and succeeded in domesticating it. In the course of years it grew to be fourteen feet in length, and became tame and playful, and never showing the slightest symptom of anger when handled by the children, but it would not allow its rattles to be touched. It became very much attached to its master,
