THE LADY REMEMBERED.

Instructive Session of the Pumpkin Hollow Ladies' Literary Club.

In a town not far from Detroit the ladies have organized a "Literary Club." There eight members in the society, and by way of diversity they give a "high tea" to eight favorite gentlemen once a fortnight. The other night "Robert Elsmere" was brought up for discussion. No one had read the book, but each individual had seen fragmentary reviews and all felt stirred for the discussion. "Let me see," ventured Miss Wise, who is the author of "Robert Elsmere?" "I never can think."

"No I." "I have forgotten."

"So have I."

"I never can remember a new author's name two minutes."

"No I."

"Here comes Mrs. Almons; she will know."

Mrs. Almons was the president—one of those self-sufficient people who know how to poison the head and look wise.

"Yes, Mrs. Almons is a walking encyclopedia," offered young Mr. Billings. "Pray, tell us, madame president, do you write 'Robert Elsmere?'"

"Why, Margaret Deland, of course," said the walking encyclopedia, with prompt decision.

"O yes."

"O yes."

"Of course," echoed a fourth voice. "There have been three of these religious novels within a year, John Ward, Preacher, written by—"

"Mrs. Humphrey Ward,"

"They say she named John after her father," prompted Mr. Billings.

"So English."

"Decidedly," continued Miss Wise, "and Love and Theology. Who wrote that, Mrs. Almons? I never can remember."

"Mrs. Cardinal Woolsey," answered the president.

"Then all found themselves and took a sip of tea, while Mr. Billings assured Miss Wise that he never knew a woman equal to Mrs. Almons to remember names. Detroit Free Press.

The "geographical society" is the way latest. The gentlemen are given cards, on each of which are printed the name of some county in the state, while each lady receives a card with a county seat written upon it. The gentleman limits up the county seat of his county to take to supper and if the county seat is not known a forfeit of five cents is exacted for the information. The forfeit is collected in the usual way, all parties winning.

Senator Riddleberger is a candidate for Internal Revenue Collector in Virginia. He probably thinks the distillers have been collecting revenue from him long enough, and wants to turn the tables.
