

Grant Co. News

July 18, 1889.

There appears to be a general reduction of wages all along the line. Even some preachers would have the wages of sin curtailed. They would relegate the old-fashioned hell of the bible, paved with fire and brimstone, and substitute a kind of upholstered hades where the wicked may be temporarily side-tracked for purification.

A rifle that "wasn't loaded" was leaning against the wall of Mrs. Collins' house near Albany a few days ago, and a young woman, a guest of Mrs. Collins, picked up the gun and pulled the trigger with the usual result. Death was instantaneous, a husband and three small children mourn the loss of the lady, and the perpetrator is "overwhelmed with remorse."

The foreign insurance companies who do the bulk of the business on this coast will not declare as large dividends as usual this season. The prevalence of dry weather for so long a period at almost every point on the coast and the consequent deficiency in the water supply of many places is a fruitful cause for fires, and, unless early fall rains set in and end the drought, almost every town of note on the coast will have felt the scourge.

Never tell a local editor "that you have more papers than you can read." Just come out with the truth. Say you borrow the local paper of your neighbor. Say that you are too confounded mean to take the paper, pay for it and read it like an honest man. Say that you are too stingy to pay for that which you can borrow. This would come nearer the truth and it is written that "an honest confession doth the heart good." You would certainly enjoy life much better after having made such a confession.

Prohibition, we should judge from the results of the recent elections held in the Eastern states, is not popular. The Christian minister will tell you of the misery caused by intemperance; the playwright will picture to your imagination its horrors in the drama, or the editor may occasionally moralize about the evil effects of liquor, but it is all to no purpose so long as the government derives a revenue from an excise tax. Governments have found the spirit tax a very convenient way to collect revenue from the masses, and the rich will never allow sentiment to influence them to adopt as a substitute an income tax.

The heavy majority against the prohibition amendment to the Pennsylvania constitution and the repeal of a similar amendment to the constitution of Rhode Island, adopted but little more than a year ago, should have the effect to open, to some extent, the eyes of those well-meaning but misguided people who imagine that the cause of intemperance may be removed by sumptuary laws. Let them bend their efforts toward controlling and keeping within bounds, as far as possible, the liquor traffic, at the same time redoubing their efforts in educating the rising generation to a realization of the evils of intemperance, and in time their labors will bear fruit.

Another candidate for hell, but who imagined he would be received into the bosom of Jesus, was hanged a couple of weeks ago at Patterson, N. J., for the murder of his wife. She was only nineteen years old, very pretty, and he became jealous. They quarreled, and he literally carved her to pieces. The day before his execution, in answer to a remark upon his uneasiness the night before, he said to his keeper: "It was not the hanging I feared, it was the hereafter. I was not sure whether I would go to heaven or hell. Now I know I am going to heaven, so I fear nothing. The good priest, who has been attending me, assured me that my soul is saved, so I shall die content." One thing which is rapidly bringing the Christian religion into disrepute is this public confession of inhuman murderers, who, after committing the darkest of crimes are led by the priest to imagine that our Savior and all the angels are waiting to welcome them into the New Jerusalem, where they will be given the best make of harp and the finest crown.

A coroner's jury empaneled to investigate into the cause which led to the death of one of the victims of the Johnstown catastrophe found, on the 6th inst., that the owners of the dam were culpable in not providing sufficient waste weir and in not making the dam as secure as it should have been in view of the fact that a population of many thousands was in the valley below. Their verdict concludes: "We hold that the owners are responsible for the fearful loss of life and property resulting from breaking of the dam." The millionaire sports will doubtless be held to answer in civil damages to many of the unfortunates who lost everything by reason of their folly; but they will only answer at the bar of Heaven for the sweeping wreck of human life caused by their neglect to tear away the dam when it was first condemned as unsafe.
