He knew how his wife would resent it if he forgot to make her a birthday present. But it was not till he rose that morning that he remembered what anniversary it was. Then he hurried downstairs before his wife went, and selected the biggest plate in the china closet placed it on the hall table and beckoned the dog in from the back yard. He went to his wife and said: "My love, this being your birthday, I have prepared a pleasant little surprise for you. Come and see how you like it." He ran down stairs and kicking the dog out of the house, cried in well-feigned amazement. "If that cursed beast hasn't eaten the whole beautiful cake!"

Society regulates and governs itself. No man or set of men can control it. It is based upon the immutable law of congeniality. People of congenial natures flock together like birds of a feather.
